Hard Work Gets It.

(Copyright, 1928.)

WHEN this was written, yesterday, wise men in Houston expected Gov. Smith to be nominated by acclamation and much enthusiasm on the first ballot, and Senator Robinson of Arkansas to be nominated, also on one ballot, for vice president.

LUDWIG, the eminent German writer, spent an afternoon with John D. Rockefeller, and will tell the world about him. Mr. Rockefeller said to him: "Look, I have done everything I have done by being quiet. When I was young I only needed to put the right people in the right job."

THAT'S the biggest problem, to find the right people and put them in the right job.

Industrialists say there are not enough men for the big positions. That is true. Also, there are not enough big industrialists that know the right man for the big position when they see him. The man is usually right under their noses.

IN THE South everything is courtesy. Bootleggers at Houston apologized through a local newspaper, expressing regret at being compelled to raise prices. They had no idea how thirsty the crowd would be, and found themselves on Monday with only 3,000 cases, 36,000 bottles, of whisky and only casual assistance from local stills. Under the circumstances they were obliged to raise prices. "Laws of supply and demand," they said.

It seems unnecessary for Democrats to demand an end of prohibition.

"HARD work gets it. There is no royal road to success." That was Gov. Al Smith's message to the graduating class of the Parochial High School of the Cathedral of the Immaculate Conception, of which his 18-year-old boy is president.

The advice that Gov. Smith gave the boys is needed by many would-be "get-rich-quick" moderns, old and young.

GOV. SMITH advised the boys to benefit by their education and appreciate an advantage that he never had.

He told them that when other men talked about their college degrees, B. A., Ph. D., etc., he told them his letters were F. F. M., standing for "Fulton Fish Market," where he worked as a lad.

Gov. Smith's early experiences in hard work will enable him to appeal to many men in his campaign that would not be reached by a "Ph. D."

"CALL MONEY," the kind used for stock gambling, cost 7 per cent yesterday. Somebody wants to discourage gambling foolishness. But even 7 per cent money and calling $30,000,000 by the banks did not discourage Wall Street. Stock sales have dropped to "ONLY" something over 1,000,000 shares. But prices hold and rise.

If you own a stock exchange seat don't be in a hurry to sell it. You will see many five-million shares days.

A GIRL 25 years old narrowly escaped death when two men threw her from a swiftly moving automobile. She told police the men threw her out when she "resented their remarks."

Other young women should profit by the warning: "Not to accept invitations from unknown gentlemen."

THE Democratic platform is expected to ignore the League of Nations absolutely. That's as wise as it would be to ignore Tut-Ankh-Amen—both are dead.

Besides, on one occasion, when Democrats took the League to their bosoms and Republicans wisely went the other way, the result was 7,000,000 plurality, against the League.

That should convince the Democratic platform writers. There is no accident about 7,000,000 plurality.

IN THE jungle wild animals take their own photographs, but don't know what a flashlight means. Patrolmen placed a camera in St. Joseph's Roman Catholic Church near the poor box, arranged so that Charles Callan, when he stole $12.88 from the box, took his own photograph, rang a bell that brought the police and generally caused his undoing. After seeing the photograph he confessed.

HOUSTON, Tex., June 27.—Beaming with smiles, the South's happiest Negro today was contemplating another peek at the convention from the inside, as mascot of the "Old Gray Mare" Band, the darky nonchalantly paraded with the red-shirted music organization right by the ticket-takers yesterday, but not without a challenge.

"Where you goin' boy?"

"Ah's wid de band, suh."

And he proudly passed in. Seating himself with the band, he said: "Sho'ly am great to be uh Democrat."

TEX RICKARD, THE PROMOTER, IS GOING TO MAKE A BID FOR THE 1932 DEMOCRATIC CONVENTION.

"I COULD HAVE HAD THIS ONE," TEX WAS HEARD TO SAY, "BUT SOME OF THE BOYS WALKED OUT ON ME AND THREW UP THE CAMPAIGN. BUT I'M REALLY GOING OUT AFTER THE NEXT ONE."

The voice amplifiers worked in fine form during the address of Claude G. Bowers sounding the keynote. Every word carried to the far recesses of the big coliseum. One man as far back as he could stand and remain in the convention hall was enthusiastic but puzzled. "I never heard anything like this," he remarked to a companion. "That's the biggest voice for such a little fellow I ever heard."

AIRPORT, ROADS LEAD VOTE

The voters of Allegheny county recorded their emphatic approval of the $43,680,000 bond isue for public improvements, the greatest launched in the county, at the special election yesterday.

An airport and a town hall, planned to keep this county abreast of the march of progress, are authorized by the electors in the vast program embracing new roads, boulevards, bridges, a county office building and county parks expansion, assuring the "State of Allegheny" a place among the leaders in counties of the nation in physical development.

ALL ITEMS OVER TOP

Reports from nearly two-thirds of the 1,422 election districts of the county show that all of the seven projects submitted to the people for indorsement were approved by an average vote of two-to-one. Complete returns may increase this ratio.

On four questions, the airport, roads, boulevards and bridges, the vote is running more than two-to-one, while on three questions, town

Miners Sing of Peace —and Then the Charge!

Rev. A. J. Phillips.

FIVE HUNDRED members of striking miners' families met at Rossiter in an open-air church service Sunday. They sang two hymns, one ending—

"Christians all should dwell together in the bonds of peace;

"All the clashing of opinions, all the strife should cease."

Then mounted state troopers and deputy sheriffs, armed, charged the meeting.

ROSSITER, Pa., June 27.—In defiance of the state police the Rev. A. J. Phillips' flock of striking miners' families prepared today to hold open-air services next Sunday at the same place where their meeting was dispersed last Sunday by the troopers.

Messengers were sent to Brookville, Jefferson county seat, for legal advice. Pastor Phillips said he was determined to hold the meeting. Mrs. Margaret Harkleroad, the organist, said she would be on hand.

BARRED FROM CHURCH

The congregation's plight is due to the fact that it has been barred from further use of the Magyar Presbyterian Church, where four United States senators of the coal investigation committee joined with the strikers in singing hymns last February in alleged violation of Judge J. N. Langham's famous injunction.

The congregation met last Sunday in a field on the outskirts of Ros-

Mantell, Actor, Dies

ATLANTIC HIGHLANDS, N. J., June 27.—Robert B. Mantell, noted Shakespearean actor, died shortly after noon today at his country home, "Brucewood," here.

With Mr. Mantell when he died were his wife, Mrs. Genevieve Hamper Mantell, and their son, Bruce. A daughter was reported to be on her way from the Pacific Coast, but failed to arrive in time to be at her father's bedside.

Mr. Mantell suffered a general breakdown about six weeks ago while on a tour with his Shakespearean theatrical company in Baltimore, Washington and other eastern cities. This breakdown followed another less serious, suffered last winter while the veteran actor and producer was touring the West. For the last week Mr. Mantell's condition has been regarded as critical.

COAL SALE RISES ON RATE CUT

Pittsburgh and surrounding communities in the Pittsburgh coal district already are feeling the benefit of reduced freight rates on lake cargo coal, which became effective June 18 under a ruling of the Interstate Commerce Commission, according to reports of the coal companies and the carriers.

Shipment of lake cargo coal was further stimulated today when the reduced freight rate became effective on the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, 10 days later than the other Northern coal carriers. Re opening of mines which have been shut down has been reported as a result.

The Pittsburgh Coal Company last week produced and shipped 184,1 tons of coal against 155,946 tons the previous week, it was announced today. Other operators say they have made proportionate increases in their output.

Increased payrolls in the mining districts, with the resultant benefit to merchants and others throughout the northern coal fields, it is declared, will bring about prosperous conditions such as have not been enjoyed for several years. The weekly output is expected to be increased as the season progresses.

FREED, OLGA TO AWAIT FIANCE

By ALMA SIOUX SCARBERRY.

"Yes, I love Mike and I will wait for him. Six to twelve years will pass. I am going right to work and I will try to be happy. Oh, I'm even happy right now!"

So declared Olga Pawlishak as she walked out to freedom this morning. She was acquitted of a murder charge last night and today an involuntary manslaughter charge was dropped.

For, a few moments before, her sleeve touching the coat of her sweetheart, Mike Popowich, she heard a judge pronounce his sentence.

Visiting Judge A. B. Smith sentenced him to 6 to 12 years in the Western Penitentiary on his plea of guilty to the murder of Nick Anderson, 38, of Ambridge, of which Olga was acquitted. Judge Smith fixed Mike's guilt at second-degree.

Mike's dilemma was in sad contrast with the girl's. An elderly, sad-eyed woman—Mike's mother—sent a tragic shriek through the courtroom as Mike, dabbing a handkerchief to his face, heard Judge Smith voice his fate.

Olga is sorry she said she killed Anderson in her Fair Oaks home last January to shield Mike.

"I made a big mistake and I believe it harmed Mike a great deal more than it would if I had told the truth. It never pays to lie. I wouldn't do it if I had a chance to live these months over again."

"BUT I LOVED HIM SO"

Olga has had a great deal of experience in the business world and her first thought is finding a job. She has waited tables, sold tickets at a theater window, and has done house work.

Today she says she is going right straight to a home-cooked dinner and hopes her mother has all the things she likes.

"Mother brought a basket every week and I ate almost nothing except what she brought." Olga smiled as she anticipated her mother's delicious cooking and her own bed. "After the first few days I got so I couldn't eat jail food at all."

The secret of her yellow curls now being a dull chestnut is out. "Isn't my hair a mess?" Olga made a wry face. "I always washed it with lemon twice a week and it has had such bad care in the jail."

LOTTERY SALE STILL MENACE

Gangland Bullets 'Get' Big Tim Murphy

LOTTERIES MENACING SCHOOLS STILL

Sale of lottery tickets on the New York clearing house figures still constitutes a menace among school children of the Hill district, Dr. William M. Davidson, superintendent of Pittsburgh Public Schools, declared today in spite of the recent crusade against it. However, he believes the activities of agents among the pupils has been halted for the time being at least.

"As long as there is a chance, these fellows will continue to work under cover," Dr. Davidson declared, "but we are at work trying to stamp it out. Our investigation still is going on, and as soon as I get a report I will take measures to correct the situation."

Reports were sent to Dr. Davidson by the principals of the Moorhead, Rose and Franklin schools, where activities of the lottery agents were uncovered last week. In all the reports, Dr. Davidson says, the principals said they believed the sale of tickets had halted temporarily, but indicated the possibility of the resumption of activities among the lottery agents as soon as a letup occurred in the drive being conducted by school officials, police and the Children's Service Bureau.

Ray L. Huff, principal of Moorhead School, said this morning that he has been unable to find any trace of lottery ticket sales since police began their crusade against the agents last week.

David Terry, secretary of the Children's Service Bureau, revealed that his organization had preferred charges against several of the suspects held by police. Nothing will be done, however, until Magistrate John J. Verona makes a decision in the case. At a hearing yesterday two proprietors and eight agents were held over pending the magistrate's decision.

RACKETEER RIDDLED IN HAIL OF LEAD

International News Service.

CHICAGO, June 27.—"Big Tim" Murphy, labor leader, politician and "racketeer" de luxe, lay dead here today—a victim of machine gun bullets.

Chicago's most picturesque demi-gangster was riddled with leaden slugs on the front lawn of his Rogers Park house late last night after he had answered a mysterious summons to his front door.

When the deadly rat-tat-tat of the machine gun died away, the gangster assasssins had bagged their most prominent quarry since the dramatic shooting several years ago of Dion O'Banion.

Murphy, whose checkered career has perhaps been more colorful than any other of his kind, was listening in on the radio to the Democratic convention when his front door bell rang. With him was his brother-in-law, Harry Diggs.

STEPS OUT TO DIE

Remembering his gangland schooling, Murphy peered from a side door for a glimpse of the party who had rung his front door bell. He saw no one. Followed by Diggs, he stepped upon the lawn to investigate.

Simultaneously a large closed automobile rolled passed the house. Before Murphy could retreat there was a spit of flame from the automobile with the crackling of a machine gun. "Big Tim" instinctively dropped to the ground, but the sweep of the death-dealing gun was lowered to rake the lawn. Murphy was trapped in the range of fire and his body riddled with bullets.

HUNT SUSPECT

Diggs, who had leaped backward, escaped the hail of lead. As the death car sped away, after a full minute of firing, Diggs dragged the limp form of Murphy into the house. He was dead.

Five minutes after Chief of Detectives William O'Connor had arrived on the scene, he ordered a search for "Mike de Pike" Heitler, West Side underworld character and notorious as an operator of gambling and vice resorts.

Heitler had been a constant companion of Murphy during the past few months, according to Chief O'Connor.

BLAME DYERS' WAR

Murphy is said to have been operating a palatial gambling resort on the North Side, but warfare in the cleaners' and dyers' industry, in which "Big Tim" sought control, is believed to have brought about his death.

Through his activities in the cleaners' and dyers' war, Murphy is believed to have incurred the enmity of "Scarface Al" Capone, who was taken into partnership with one of the city's largest cleaners for the purpose of "fighting gunmen with gunmen."

Diggs, the only known witness to the shooting, was unable to furnish a close description of the car on account of semi-darkness. Neither could he say how many gangsters were in the death car.

Murphy was 42 years old; he lived with his wife and an adopted daughter in a fashionable section of Rogers Park.

Born and reared in a section known as "Back of the Yards," "Big Tim" was regarded as the most dangerous character ever developed in that turbulent district. He grew up in gangster environment, early learned their tactics and soon became a power in his neighborhood.

He became a "whispering politician," and mounted to a position of power. Meanwhile he organized various classes of workers for personal profit and became a gambler of note.

His political aspirations carried him to the state legislature and once he ran for Congress, failing of election by only 700 votes.

He was both feared and admired. It was said of him that for every friend he had an enemy. He was almost worshipped by those who followed him.

SENT TO PENITENTIARY

The high light of Murphy's fluctuating career came several years ago when he was convicted of the famous Dearborn street mail robbery and sentenced to Leavenworth Penitentiary.

After servng his term he returned to Chicago, where he engaged in various "rackets" that kept police constantly on his trail. Several times during his career he was arrested on murder charges, but never convicted.

"Big Tim's" money was not all squandered selfishly, however. He was noted for his benefactions, especially among the poverty-stricken classes from which he had arisen.

To hundreds of poor families living "back of the yards" and elsewhere, "Big Tim" was a sort of Robin Hood, who gave them their first and some times only taste of the luxuries of life.

Therefore, while hundreds condemn, other hundreds will tell you, in their own way: "There was a guy."

RAILROADERS BALLOT IN SUN-TELE'S POLL

HOOVER OR SMITH?

Trainmen passing to and fro in Pennsylvania Station have taken an interest in The Sun-Tele's poll among Pittsburghers to determine this city's presidential sentiment with the question "Do you prefer Hoover or Smith for the presidency?" Here are railroaders balloting on the voting machine located at the depot for the poll.

OHIO FOR SMITH; DRAFT PLATFORM

Smith in this one, was the ringmaster of the day. His speech as permanent chairman of this convention was calculated to still further drive home to Democrats the party need for agreement and not dissension on the eve of the campaign.

OHIO BOLTS TO SMITH

The nomination of Gov. Smith, probably on the first ballot, became assured today when the Ohio delegation arranged to swing most of its 48 votes to the New York Governor. Coincident with the decision of the Buckeye State delegates to shift to Smith, the Oklahoma delegation decided in caucus to cast its 20 votes on the first ballot for Reed, of Missouri. The delegation is bound by the unit rule.

A test fight that may afford the first official insight into the overwhelming power of the Smith forces appeared not improbable as the session got under way.

The credentials committee voted 42 to 7 early this morning to seat the Smith delegation of 20 from Louisiana, as opposed to the anti-Smith faction backed by Mrs. Genevieve Clark Thomson, of New Orleans, a daughter of the late Champ Clark, who has been an indefatigable worker for Senator Reed, of Missouri.

The ousted delegation threatened to force a vote in the convention itself on the action of the credentials committee by presenting a minority report.

NOT ALL HARMONY

An easy victory for the Smith delegation, headed by Gov. Huey P. Long and Col. Robert Ewing, was anticipated whenever the convention got around to the voting stage. The Smith people are securely in the saddle and riding easily all down the line.

In every direction save that of prohibition, the Democrats seemed today to be steering toward the harmony that has not been their's since the 1916 convention.

And the leaders were hopeful that even there a strenuous fight can be avoided.

It was hot again in Sam Houston's big 10-acre hall today—a sultry, sticky heat that followed last night's deluge of rain. Even the electric fans and the tricky devices with which the hall has been equipped to make it comfortable fought a losing battle against the heavy, muggy atmosphere.

The delegates and visitors were glad enough to peel their coats. The women wore their fluffiest things. As for the men, they have almost depleted the Houston stores of linen suits and cotton things that look more like pajamas than business suits.

The crowd came slowly to the hall. And, arriving, they slipped into their seats and fanned vigorously.

16,000 SWELTER

It was 11:45 before Claude G. Bowers' gavel fell a-banging. At this time the hall was jammed, packed and perspiring profusely. Sixteen thousand people even in a hall as big as Sam Houston's aren't conducive to refrigerating the atmosphere.

The Rev. Curtis Gilmore, unclerical looking man, in a blue suit and a blue shirt with the collar melted down, pronounced the invocation. He prayed for prosperity, for wisdom in the decision of great issues, for co-operation and for human brotherhood.

William W. Durbin, of Ohio, was recognized as the chairman of the committee on permanent organization, and he proposed the election of Senator robinson as permanent chairman. There was a chorus of approval, and when the question was put a few minutes later it went over with a whoop and unanimously. The reception which the burly Arkansan got from the crowd indicated pretty clearly that he is a popular man.

Robinson took over the gavel, for which most of the delegates gave thanks, as with an experienced legislator and parliamentarian in the chair, they expected the convention to click a little faster hereafter.

GAMBLING DRIVE NETS 31 FINES

Councilman Robert Garland's broadside against alleged "wide open" gambling, bore fruit in Morals Court today when three slot machines, seized by police, were displayed as evidence and two proprietors of places where the devices were taken were fined $100 each.

Two of the machines, police testified, were seized in a club at 1111 Bingham street, operated by John McMasters, when a squad from the South Side Station raided the place last night. The third machine was taken when Hill district police raided the place of "Buddy" Reese, Negro, 1620 Clark street.

Magistrate A. D. Brandon fined McMasters and Reese $100 each with the alternative of 30 days to the workhouse each on charges of keeping disorderly houses. Twenty-nine Negroes arrested in Reese's place was fined $3 each.

DIVORCE GIVEN MRS. VERNER

Mrs. Dorothy Willock Verner, 31, of 5400 Beacon street, today was granted a divorce from Elyine M. Verner, of Halton road, Oakmont, and awarded custody of their three children.

At a hearing last week the wife testified that she and her husband had separated May 6, 1926, after she had returned from Florida to their home at the "Red Gable Farm" in the northern end of the county. Her husband didn't want the responsibility of family cares, she testified. Desertion was the basis of the suit.

Judge Ambrose B. Reid granted the divorce.

THE PAPER, THEY ALWAYS ADD: "ALL ABOUT AL SMITH."

"Hail, Hail, the Gang's All Here," was entered as a runner-up in the convention song championship by the Houston Ladies' band. Decked in the latest thing in navy blue and gold braid, they followed a silk Texas flag made by Mrs. Leslie Isabelle Brandt, of Houston, an officer of the Woman's Benefit Association, an insurance organization headed by Miss Bina West, Republican National committeewoman.

AFTER LONG AND MEDITATIVE CONTEMPLATION OF WHITE SATIN BADGES INSCRIBED "TEXAS FOR DRY PLATFORM AND CANDIDATES," AND SOLICITOUSLY PROFFERED BY LADIES OF THE DRY LEAGUES, A TALL AND LOOSE-JOINTED INDIVIDUAL, SLIGHTLY UNCERTAIN IN HIS STEPS, DRAWLED:

"WE-E-ELL, I RECKON I'M JUST FROM TEXAS. CAN'T I HAVE ONE WITH JUST TEXAS?"

Pat O'Keefe, 70-year-old Dallas buck and wing dancer, claims he has attended every Democratic convention since 1868. He was doing his stuff in a hotel lobby when one of the crowd stepped forward and asked:

"How many conventions have you attended Pat?"

"About 30 I guess," he replied. This would put him far past the century mark and the crowd naturally gasped. As Pat walked away muttering to himself, another man in the crowd walked up to him.

"Didn't think I would find you at this one," he told Pat.

"Yep, I'm here, and I'll be at the next one," Pat answered.

Uproar as Woman Is Acquitted

In two hours today a jury acquitted Rose Bartolette, 35, charged with murdering her common-law husband, Simone Lagatutta, 39, of 538 Becks Run road.

When the verdict was announced a crowd of 200 spectators, a majority of them women, broke into a demonstration that provoked Judge James R. Macfarlane. He ordered brought before him any persons who had contributed to the uproar.

Two pretty girls, Josephine Murgie, 18, and Mary Christy, 19, were picked from the crowd, arraigned, and fined $5 each by Judge Marfarlane for contempt of court.

Mrs. Bartolette's defense was that in a scuffle with Lagatutta, a revolver had discharged. The prosecution charged that Mrs. Bartolette, infuriated when she learned that Lagatutta had shared his attentions with another, had shot him. Lagatutta, on his deathbed, married Pauline Costanza, 17, of Clark street, a young mother.

FOUND HIDING IN SHOP, ACCUSED OF ROBBERY

Found hiding in the grocery of S. S. Little, 530 North Negley avenue, at 6 o'clock this morning, John Otis, 22, of 136 Long way, was arrested. He had taken $3 from a cash register, police allege, after entering the building by breaking a rear window. At a hearing before Magistrate W. J. Soost in East End Police Station today he was held for further investigation.

opportunity in thanking the owners of The Sun-Telegraph for the splendid co-operation they gave in advising the public of the merits of the issue. I also desire to express my personal thanks to the editors and staff who so willingly gave their time and efforts. Had it not been for The Sun-Tele I am sure the bond issue would not have met with the success it has. Your paper is to be commended for its policy in promoting progress. I wish it continued success."

COMMISSIONER E. V. BABCOCK—"The Sun-Telegraph lent powerful support both editorially and through its news items to the county bond election. I express great appreciation for the substantial help given to the campaign by your paper. Through the medium of The Sun-Tele and other newspapers all the citizens were thoroughly posted on every item in the bond issue as they had never been before on any bond election."

NORMAN F. BROWN—"Through the medium of your news columns the public was intelligently informed on each of the seven items of the people's bond issue. I know that your paper, through its progressive policy, was instrumental to a large extent in making the bond issue such a success. The Sun-Tele has promoted, and I am sure will continue to promote, progress. During the campaign your paper turned over its columns in the interests of the issue. Your editorials were splendid. When Mr. Hearst entered the newspaper field in this city a new era in newspaper publication was established. May The Sun-Tele remain long with us."

JAMES C. CHAPLIN—"It seems only fitting and right that the Pittsburgh papers should be commended for the way in which they handled the people's bond issue, and I wish to take this occasion to express to you, in behalf of the People's Bond Issue Association, their thanks for the wonderful work you, your paper and your staff have done in this connection.

"I have been connected with banking institutions for many years, and never before have I seen any matter of such great public interest handled in a more masterly way than you have handled this question."

MRS. HENRY CHALFANT MILLER—"The members of the executive board of the Allegheny County League of Women Voters wish to thank you for the splendid co-operation which you gave them in publishing the letters which presented their views on the proposed bond issue.

"As a member of the county government committee, under whose careful supervision these letters were gotten out, I, too, wish to express my deep appreciation of your help in giving us good publicity."

MILT'S DERBY IN 395TH HOUR

MADISON SQUARE GARDEN, NEW YORK, June 27. — Nine couples continue their "sleepless" hoofing in Milt Crandall's dance derby here at 9 o'clock this morning after completing their three hundred and ninety-fifth hour, and all of them looked good for at least another day, after passing the "goofing" hours this morning.

Three of the teams are Pittsburghers, Tommy Nolan and Anna King, Eddie Leonard and Marianne Jacque and William Bush and Mary Promitis. The last couple to drop out of the contest for the $5,000 prize was Joe Lopez, of Mexico City, and his partner, Airelar Ksohmin, of Chicago. The Ksohmin girl was eliminated early Tuesday morning with a bad foot.

Last night Crandall announced that besides the $5,000 the winners will receive, he will turn over his end of the receipts of a "marathon ball" to be held following the derby.

Pittsburgh AS OTHERS SEE US

"Take it from me, the man who tells you that Pittsburgh is a smoky city has never been in a smoky city in his life."

—FRANK H. VIZETELLY.

FRANK H. VIZETELLY

FRANK H. VIZETELLY, lexicographer and author, born in London, England, April 2, 1864; educated at Lycee Baudard, France, and Arnold College, Eastbourne, England. Editor of the Standard Dictionary, 1891-1903. Author and compiler of reference works, and contributing editor of the Literary Digest; editor of the Literary Digest History of the World War. Lives in New York City.

For 30 years I had religiously believed the stories told me about your great city, and in my own mind pictured it to parallel the great manufacturing towns in Warwickshire and Staffordshire—overhung by a pall of black smoke, oppressive enough to crush even the most enthusiastic spirits. Yes, I had been taught to believe that Pittsburgh was practically the mouth of another Hell, and that its furnaces belched forth an intense heat that withered everything within miles around.

But pleasant were the effects of actual realization to me! These were, a beautiful city built on a hill shining in glorious sunlight, and bathed in a balmy November air—a town brimful of energy to the point of bubbling over. . . .

Take it from me, the man who tells you that Pittsburgh is a smoky city has never been in a smoky city in his life. I have. I know my Birmingham, my Stafford, Woolverhampton . . . and I know my London, for I was born there, and I can say with truth, that the man who has not seen these cities does not know what smoky towns are. Pittsburgh smoky? Nonsense! It is the most beautiful city, the most healthy, the cleanest, and to me the most remarkably well laid out city I have seen. Do not quibble with me about the laying out. I mean scenic, not systematic. . . .

Hymn-Singing Miners Routed by Police

ATTACKS FOCUS ON MELLON

By WILLIAM I. GRUNDISH,
Staff Correspondent.

HOUSTON, Tex., June 27.—Secretary of the Treasury A. W. Mellon of Pittsburgh and Senator William S. Vare of Philadelphia will be the special targets for the oratorical siege guns of the Democratic forces during the coming campaign.

That much was apparent when Claude G. Bowers, the keynoter at the convention here, attempted to place upon Secretary Mellon, to whom he referred as "the dictator of the administration," the blame for the scandals brought to light during the last few years.

"The revered head of the Treasury made no protest against the party taking its share out of the pot filled by the pillaging of the nation's property," charged Bowers. "Silence was golden—for the party chest."

FARMERS 'DOOR-MAT'

Again and again in the course of his address, Bowers brought in the Mellon name or a reference to Mellon interests as he endeavored to carry the responsibility for the oil scandals, vote frauds and excessive campaign expenditures from those indicted or punished upwards to the heads of the Republican administration.

"It is a tragic thing," he said, "to find a government mortgaged to a little group that could be crowded into the directors' room of the Aluminum Company of America."

He was especially vigorous in his attack upon Secretary Mellon when he charged the Republican administration with making agriculture a door-mat upon which other industries can wipe their feet, referring to the Secretary at one time as "the Pittsburgh Bratiano who decided to make Rumanian peasants of American farmers to fill the coffers of a purse-proud castle."

"While the little group represented by Mr. Mellon has found fine plucking in the vineyard of the state there have been nothing but thorns and thistles for the tillers of the soil," he charged.

CARRY BLAME HIGH

Bowers made it very clear that he is not one of those who regard Secretary Mellon as sacrosanct. For every compliment paid the Secretary at the Kansas City convention, the keynoter replied with invective and innuendo, with an air of one who felt: "If this is treason, then make the most of it." His entire address indicated that the oratorical tactics of the Democratic Party this fall will be to place the blame for all scandals, not on the underlings, but on Secretary of the Treasury Mellon and the President.

The situation in Nicaragua was cleverly linked with the Vare machine in Philadelphia by Bowers, who said: "Through the stupidity of their dollar diplomacy we have stumbled into a petty war with Nicaragua that is taking its daily toll of human lives. Do they tell us we are there to guarantee an honest election? Why, not long ago we were not able to guarantee an honest election in the city of Philadelphia. Do they say that we are there to prevent rioting in the election? Why, at the time we were sending Marines to Nicaragua we were campaigning with bombs in the city of Chicago."

GOOD CAMPAIGN STUFF

It was good campaign stuff, that speech of the New York editorial writer, and more exciting than any made in Kansas City, just as "condemn and arraign" speeches always are more exciting than "point with pride" addresses. Judging from the talk in the Pennsylvania headquarters, it made a hit with most of the delegates from that state who are more determined than ever, with Gov. Al Smith as standard-bearer, to swing the state, Republican since the Civil War, into the Democratic column.

The Pennsylvania delegation does not seem to care much who the vice presidential nominee happens to be or what the platform is, just as long as Smith is nominated. His nomination today seems more certain than ever. National Committeeman Joseph F. Guffey, Pittsburgh, looks for it on the first ballot. According to some Pennsylvanians, Ohio may have the honor of putting Smith across. That state's delegation is pledged to Senator Atlee Pomerene and, after voting for him, may change its vote to Smith.

SMITH PENNA. IDOL

The attitude of the majority of the Pennsylvania delegation was expressed as follows today by David L. Lawrence of Pittsburgh: "We are for Al Smith for president. We are for the vice president Al Smith wants and we are for the platform Al Smith wants."

2ND PLACE TEMPTS REED

International News Service.

SAM HOUSTON HALL, Houston, Tex., June 27.—James A. Reed, white-haired senator from Missouri and Gov. Al Smith's only rival for the Democratic nomination for President, is wavering in his "to the end of the road" campaign and may throw Missouri's 36 votes to Smith on the first ballot.

From a source close to the battle-scarred veteran of many political campaigns, it is learned that he is listening for the first time to talk of second place on the ticket for him.

Senator Reed is in seclusion and is not present in the convention hall today, but Joe Shannon, one of his two right hand men from Kansas City is and admitted defeat.

"Smith can have 800 votes on the first ballot if he wants them," said Shannon.

With committees all appointed, an inspiring keynote address over and other preliminaries out of the way, the Democrats settled down today to the serious business of their convention, the preparation and adoption of a platform and the choice of candidates for president and vice president.

There is every indication that the prohibition issue will be slurred over here, as it was in Kansas City and as it has been in every political meeting since the adoption of the Eighteenth amendment.

siter. A melodeon was installed under a tree. A rock was made to serve as a pulpit. Pastor Phillips prayed. To the accompaniment of the organ the congregation, numbering 500, and including numerous women and children, sang two hymns. One, called "The Reformation Glory," had this stanza:

"Christians all should dwell together in the bonds of peace;
"All the clashing of opinions, all the strife should cease."

Faber McCloskey, vice president of District No. 2, United Mine Workers of America, was asked to speak. He had not proceeded far when the state troopers and deputy sheriffs, who had been waiting, mounted and armed, on the edge of the gathering, advanced to the rostrum and bade the congregation disperse, on the ground that the meeting was in violation of a proclamation issued by the sheriff of Indiana county.

Robert Slee, a member of the congregation and secretary of Local Union No. 1736 of the United Mine Workers, said the troopers had tear bombs. Mrs. Margaret Hughes said the officers endangered the lives of children who ran the risk of falling under the horses.

Corp. Cletus Baumgardner, who led the state police, denied both charges, and was upheld by Corp. James Rehanek, chief of the deputy sheriffs at Rossiter.

Pastor Phillips questioned the authority of the police to break up the meeting, saying it was held on the Jefferson county side of the county line, where the Indiana sheriff's proclamation did not apply.

FIREWORKS BAN ORDERED

In a general police order issued last night by Police Superintendent Peter P. Walsh, patrolmen were ordered to arrest every person found setting off fireworks. Offenders under 16 will be sent to Juvenile Court. Those over 16 will be sent to police stations and a charge of violating a city ordinance placed against them.

A $10 forfeit will be required for the release of those taken in the roundup. The crusade will continue until after the Fourth.

The action of Superintendent Walsh followed a demand made on him yesterday by Council. It is the most drastic action to be taken in an effort to enforce the anti-firecracker ordinance, since the ordinance was passed more than a year ago.

Council participated in another heated discussion on the ordinance yesterday. Public Safety Director James M. Clark and Superintendent Walsh were requested to appear before Council yesterday and explain why, as council alleges, the ordinance was not being observed. Neither Director Clark nor the Superintendent appeared at the appointed hour. Director Clark left the city Monday night. When Council learned this, Superintendent Walsh was sent for and came.

A survey ordered by Council showing the number of permits issued to merchants to sell fireworks this year, disclosed that 58 permits has been issued so far. Last year 22 permits were issued. A merchant is required to pay $50 for permission to sell. The survey showed that a few merchants were selling fireworks without permits. They will be arrested.

THE SUNDAY SUN TELEGRAPH

SUN-TELE PICNIC GIVEN PRAISE

Everywhere in Pittsburgh and throughout Western Pennsylvania people are talking about The Sun-Tele's free jubilee which will be held for 50,000 children at National Amusement Park Tuesday, July 3. Public officials, businessmen, social workers, school teachers and the people generally are praising the plan evolved by The Sun-Tele to start off the summer vacation season with the biggest outing ever tendered the children of this district.

Dr. William M. Davidson, superintendent of Pittsburgh schools, busy with the closing exercises which are being held this week, paused a moment at his work to say a word of good cheer about the jubilee.

"It is a fine thing for the Sun-Telegraph to brighten the lives of its little friends with a day outdoors, providing free amusements and a good time. To many children this offers their only chance to visit a wonderland park and the event will linger in their memories as long as they live. I want them all to know that I am wishing them pleasant sunshine in the skies as I know it will be in all their hearts."

Mrs. Enoch Rauh, who has been working among little children all her life, wrote the Sun-Tele:

"It is stimulating indeed that a newspaper has given serious thought to the children of its readers and to the younger readers themselves. It is encouraging, too, that a day of enjoyment and recreation is to be provided for the young people of Pittsburgh, because anything that contributes to the happiness of children is a step in the right direction in promoting the public welfare and the civic betterment of all the people.

"The publishers of your excellent daily, are to be congratulated that the little folk have joined so enthusiastically in attending the jubilee, and the editor should feel complimented highely by the interest they are showing. If the Sun-Tele can count on the children as its firm friends, it has nothing to fear from the future. In a very few years all these little picnickers of today will be the readers and advertisers in your valued publication."

James Francis Burke, general counsel for the Republican National Committee on his return from Washington said the best news he had heard was about the Sun-Tele's jubilee.

"After attending a national convention and the work that follows it, I wish I were a boy again," he said. "If I were, I sure would sign up and go to the Sun-Tele's outing, because I am certain I would have a good time."

HOME CIRCLE MEETING GOES TO HARRISBURG

UNIONTOWN, Pa., June 27.—(AP.)—The Protected Home Circle, in biennial state convention here, selected Harrisburg for its 1930 meeting. Officers will be named today.

ROBINSON RIPS REPUBLICAN REGIME

mand of the convention as permanent chairman and his first act was to make a forceful plea to the delegates not to repeat the great blunder at Madison Square Garden.

AVOID DRY SPLIT

"United we can win" was the burden of his speech. It reflected the sober, contemplative judgment of a majority of the Democratic leaders who are determined here that there shall be no division over the only real controversy that besets this convention—prohibition.

"The Democratic Party is not a Prohibition Party," he asserted. "Neither is it an anti-prohibition party. Democrats have always divided on the question of prohibition."

In this situation, he declared, the sensible thing for the Democrats to do is to "demonstrate their willingness to enter into honorable compromises and to make personal sacrifices."

"Otherwise," he said, "the opportunity which is auspicious—the opportunity for victory—will be wasted."

BROADSIDE ON G. O. P.

Senator Robinson coupled with his plea for peace on prohibition a savage attack on the record of the Harding-Coolidge administration, which, he declared, "is indefensible from any standpoint."

And he served notice that the Democrats this year are going to take full advantage of the corn belt revolt against the Republicans. He mentioned the McNary-Haugen bill by name, and gave it a roundabout indorsement.

"The Republican party," he charged, "has betrayed the farmers of the United States and now seeks again to deceive them with new false promises. The only specific measure for farm relief pledged by the Kansas City convention is increased tariff duties which experience shows cannot be effective.

"The economic equality of agriculture with other industries may be promoted by reducing the tariff on manufactured articles consumed by the farmers; by a system of export debentures; or by the adoption of the principle of the McNary-Haugen bill.

"This convention should invite support from the farmers by adherence to these principles."

SCOFFS AT "PROSPERITY"

Republican claims to prosperity he characterized as "stupid and audacious," and in support of his contention he recited a long list of bank failures, of depressions in individual industries, of the plight of the agriculturists, and then compared the record with that of the Wilson administration.

But it was on prohibition that he dwelt most. There appeared, he asserted, no prospect of repealing the Eighteenth Amendment "for many years." That being the case, he argued that it would be futile for the Democrats here assembled to incorporate a wet plank in the platform, when by so doing they might "drive out of the party many who favor prohibition and are unwilling to yield their views."

Peace on prohibition and a united attack on the Republican record of fraud and corruption during the past seven years was his advice to the convention assembled.

"WILSON REGIME—"

"The boldest champion of the opposition," he declared, "cannot recall another time when prosperity was more general than during the Wilson administration. Labor was profitably employed; industry full time; agriculture was on an equality with other businesses.

"The prosperity of the present by no means equals that under Democratic control.

"The facts on the whole do not justify the boast in the Kansas City platform.

"The Secretary of the Treasury admits in his annual report for 1927 that conditions during that year were worse than in 1926.

"The President's industrial conference board asserts that business prosperity in the United States is confined to giant corporations. The bureau of foreign and domestic commerce examined 100,000 concerns in 1927 and reported 34,000 of them earning no profits whatever.

"The commissioner of Internal Revenue states that only three-fifths of the corporations manufacturing textiles and the same percentage of corporations manufacturing leather products reported net incomes for 1925.

"The record of commercial and bank failures reflects the falsity of this claim of exceptional prosperity."

ALL ISSUES APPROVED

hall, county parks and county office building, the majorities are substantially less, although strongly in favor of the projects. The total vote cast at the election was somewhat below that cast at the county bond issue election in 1924. Returns yesterday show less than an average of 80 votes to a district, while the average in 1924 was about 90.

Returns from 926 of the 1,422 election districts in the county give these totals:

	Yes	No	Majority

BOROUGH VOTE

In addition to the county bond issue, special elections were held in Wilkinsburg, Carnegie, Brentwood and Harrison township on bond issues for local improvements and available returns show that all were substantially approved.

The local improvements involved are: Wilkinsburg, $750,000 for street, sewer and playground improvements; Carnegie, $275,000 for street and sewer improvements; Brentwood, $150,000 for new streets, and Harrison township, $125,000 for sewers and fire-fighting equipment.

The county bond issue met with general approval throughout the various sections of the county, although the vote in the wards of Pittsburgh formed the largest element in the support of the program. Large majorities were given in all wards and in many districts the approval was overwhelming.

Conspicuous opposition to all of the bond issue projects was shown by the vote in McKeesport, where overwhelming disapproval on all seven questions was indicated by returns from more than half of the total districts. Opposition is also shown by another third-class city in the county, Clairton.

Duquesne, the third third-class city, reversed its mates and gave a two-to-one vote favoring the issue. Of 1,363 votes cast in that city, majorities ranged from 933 for and 430 against on roads question to 792 for and 514 against on the town hall.

Homestead, with 20 of the 22 districts of the borough reporting, gave large majorities for the bond issue. The vote was 649 for and 265 against on roads, ranging down to 583 for and 278 against on the town hall. The three districts of Hays borough gave a three-to-one vote favoring the issue.

Returns from the boroughs and townships in the aggregate show majorities favoring all questions.

Tabulations of returns made to the county commissioners' office late last night, showed these totals:

ASPINWALL AGAINST

Boroughs in which strong opposition was voiced to the bond issue questions were Aspinwall, Munhall, Tarentum, Coraopolis and Pitcairn, while among the townships, Versailles and Elizabeth stoutly opposed the questions. Stowe township gave the program strong support. Boroughs which gave a strong indorsement to the issue included Rankin, Braddock, Avalon, Homestead, McKees Rocks, Oakmont, Sharpsburg and Verona. The issue was supported well in these boroughs; Ben Avon, Brentwood, Carnegie, Castle Shannon, Dormont, Edgeworth, Millvale, Overbrook and Swissvale.

In Wilkinsburg a number of districts recorded a heavy vote against the bond issue, in several the disfavor being overwhelming. In some districts strong support was noted and a number of districts showed a close vote on most of the questions. The North Boroughs were particularly strong behind the questions.

Districts throughout Pittsburgh were consistently heavy in supporting all questions. Many of the city districts recorded almost no votes in opposition, numerous returns showing but one or two votes cast in opposition.

The last outstanding bond issue voted in the county was in 1924, when an issue of $29,207,000 for public improvements was approved. These improvements have practically been completed, and the present issue indorsed by the people will permit the continuation of the work started at that time.

Opposition to the bond issue in McKeesport was attributed to the failure of that city to obtain for itself extensive improvements it had sought to be included in the issue. Its citizens were desirous of obtaining about $7,000,000 in improvements, including $5,000,000 for an extensive sewer system, $1,000,000 for the Jerome street widening and $500,000 for improving Snake Hollow road. None was included.

An era of prosperity over a period of several years inevitably must result from expenditure of such a vast sum as is embodied in the bond issue. Employment at good wages for thousands of workers and the money spent for materials in such a stupendous building program is certain to prove a big stimulus in practically all branches of business, it was pointed out by county officials today. Work on several of the projects will begin promptly County Commissioner Joseph G. Armstrong announced.

Commissioners Armstrong and E. V. Babcock, and Norman F. Brown, director of public works for the county, were jubilant over the passage of all the bond items at the hands of voters, and all issued statements today congratulating citizens for so strongly ratifying the plans for a greater and more modern "State of Allegheny."

RODY MARSHALL NO BETTER

"Just the same," was the report today on the condition of Attorney Rody P. Marshall, who is seriously ill in his home at 201 Lytton avenue. Dr. S. H. Ralston said Attorney Marshall was suffering from influenza-pneumonia.

KEYNOTER RAPS G. O. P. RECORD

HOUSTON, Tex., June 27.—(AP.)—Summoning the Democratic party to a war of extermination against "privilege and pillage," Claude G. Bowers told the Democratic national convention in his keynote speech last night that the Republicans had repudiated the leadership of Lincoln and openly adopted the Hamiltonian theory of government for the benefit of the wealthy and powerful.

In sentences loaded with the shrapnel of irony and invective, the New York Evening World editorial writer called the roll of the scandals of the last two Republican administrations; declared the portion of the farmer had become one of thorns and thistles, while other industries fattened on tariffs and subsidies; asserted that "the plunder bund of the power monopoly" was threatening to tighten its grip on public utilities; described the Coolidge policy in Latin America as "dollar diplomacy" conducted in the interest of American business; accused the party in power of having sent bureaucratic agents swarming over the land like the "locusts of Egypt;" and warned his fellow Democrats that the Republicans now were seeking to "drug the conscience of the nation with the doped soothing syrup of a fake prosperity."

Four Million Jobless

"We want to know what prosperity they mean," he said. "They point to a few powerful corporations enjoying the pap of paternalistic privilege and our answer is that you cannot judge the prosperity of a people by the earnings of a privileged monopoly.

"Four million jobless men is not prosperity; a million abandoned farms is not prosperity; the utter ruin of the basic industry of America is not prosperity; the failure of 4,000 banks in the seven years of normalcy is not prosperity; the failure of 23,146 commercial houses in 1927 is not prosperity.

"Do they offer us their claim of the payment of eight billions, of the public debt up to July of last year? Our answer is that six and a third billion of this amount was paid with the money or the cash assets of the Wilson administration.

"Do they offer us their record of economy? Our answer is that with the elimination of the interest on war debts, the last three years of this regime has cost the people more than four and a quarter billion more than the last three peace years of the Wilson administration.

"Mythical prosperity, mythical economy, mythical facts, mythical figures, and mythical men—the last eight years may well be treated by the historian of the far future as the mythical age of American History."

The keynoter directed his accusations repeatedly at Secretary Mellon, whom he described as a disciple of Hamilton and the direct personal beneficiary of governmental policies which the Republicans were now refusing to extend to the farmer. In tracing out the Veterans' Bureau, Daugherty and Teapot Dome scandals, he recounted how Will Hays had sought to turn over the Sinclair bonds to Mellon, who he said "made no protest against the party taking its share out of the pot filled by the pillaging of the nation's property."

Declaring that at Kansas City it was Hamilton, and not Lincoln to whom the Republican party bowed in homage, Mr. Bowers added that "it could hardly keep the Lincoln mask on its face, and Sinclair's money in its chest." He wound up a detailed denunciation of centralized authority in government and finance with this prediction:

"Give the plunder bund but eight years more of such governmental co-operation and a combination of power companies will put a few men in control of the public utilities of a mighty empire. Once in possession and entrenched, the plunder bund of the power monopoly cannot be dislodged by the fighting force of a dozen Andrew Jacksons."

Scores Farm Situation

The speaker described the farm situation as a disgrace to American civilization.

"And what does the ruling caste say to this?" he asked. "It calls it 'temporary depression.' And what does it propose? It proposes that the farmers shall become better business men.

"Now when it suits the pleasure of the privileged to legislate money into its coffer, it is applauded by the claquers as patriotic statesmanship; but when the farmer demands his share in the unhappy game of paternalism they denounce him as a radical and a crank.

"One day the head of the state by a scratch of the pen increased the tariff loot of the pig iron industry by 50 per cent; and the next day he delivered a homily to the farmers on the wickedness of expecting profit from a governmental act.

"We do not ask paternalistic privilege for the farmer, but we do demand that the hand of privilege shall be taken out of the farmers' pockets and off the farmers' throat."

Mr. Bowers appealed to the history of the Jackson and Wilson administrations to refute any charge that Democratic Presidents are enemies of business, but added that by "business" the Democracy meant small business as well as large, while the Republicans thought only of the powerful.

"We are interested in the Babbits," he said, "and they in the Bulls and Bears."

CABBY ROBBED OF CAR, CASH

A cab driver was robbed of his cab and $13 in Highland Park early today, Frankstown avenue police reported. Arnold Thompson, of 1423 Sandusky street, was driving near No. 1 reservoir when a passenger he had picked up in East Liberty drew a revolver and ordered Thompson from the cab. After forcing the cabby to empty his pockets, the robber drove away in the machine.

Screen 'Mama Boy' Growing Up Into Big Parts Fast as Fox Plan To Put Him in Janet Gaynor Opus

By REGINA CREWE

(Copyright, 1928, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

HOLLYWOOD, June 27.

REMEMBER "Mama's Boy" in "What Price Glory," and the kid who died before the firing squad in "The Legion of the Condemned." His name is Barry Norton. You'll see him soon again in Murnau's "Four Devils." And then, unless another plan goes askew, you'll see him as Janet Gaynor's leading man in her next picture.

Although the title has not yet been selected, the scene of the story is in Holland, and it is an original by Tristam Tupper. And the director will be William K. Howard, who is now finishing up on "The River Pirate," which, incidentally looks like one of the most colorful productions emanating from the Fox Studios since "Glory."

"Soapy Smith" is the deep-dyed villain of the Wilson Mizner yarn about Alaska, which the Fox people are to make under the title "Skagway." And it looks very much as though Earle Foxe will play the part. Earle, you remember, is the chap who made an over-night switch from the role of "Van Bibber," in two-reel slapstick comedies, to paris so heavy with menace that the ingenues all run away when they see him on the set. It is not unlikely that William K. Howard will wield the megaphone from the "Skagway" prompter's box.

If June Collyer's daddy wants to see his pride and joy in real robust health, he'd better lock up the New York law business and hurry out. Because June is working at a pace fairly well guaranteed to give her an "interesting" pallor. The little Gotham girl reported on the set for "Me, Gangster" at nine bells one morning, worked till two the next morning, was back on the lot at nine and was to leave at six at night for 'Frisco on location. Gee, what a cinch these movie actors have!

Adolphe Menjou and his bride are back. Gloria's in town. Eva von Berne, Norma Shearer's "find," has arrived. Dolores Del Rio's tonsilitis is better, thank you. Eddie Sedgwick is ill and directing his picture by telephone from his bedside. Which is the way we've long imagined a lot of 'em were directed. Anna Q. Nilssen is writing a story about diets, illustrated by photos of stars "before and after." Estelle Taylor and Jack are away on a trip. Louise Lorraine and Hubby Art Acord are all washed up. Yep, divorce. Marion Davies is getting sunburned instead of Kleig-burned, taking a little vacation following completion of "Her Cardboard Lover." And Lionel Barrymore will be the heavy in Lon Chaney's picture. Which doesn't necessarily mean that Lon has turned juvenile.

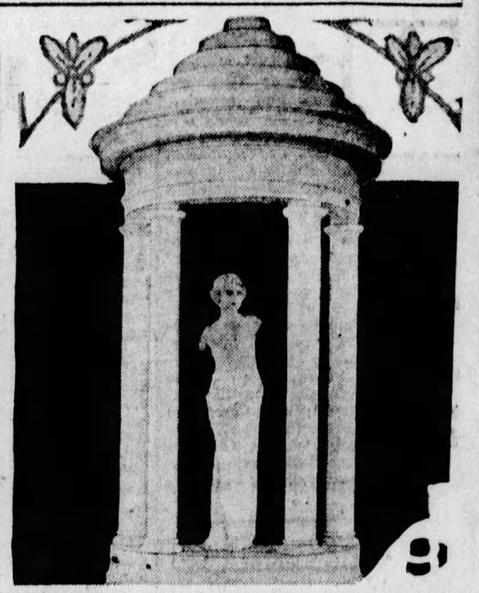
You've heard of the "Bird in a Gilded Cage," but now hear of "The Girl in the Glass Cage," which will be Dorothy Mackaill's first starring picture. Folks are liable to believe that all the leading players are "stars." As a matter of fact comparatively few occupy that rank. They may be co-starred, featured players, leads, etc., but not stars. Here's good luck to Dorothy on joining the constellation.

After all the hullabaloo as to who was to play "Mrs. Cheyney" in the screen adaptation of the stage show, it seems that no one will do it—at least for the present—for the word is that the production has been indefinitely postponed. So Constance Talmadge, and Camilla Horn and John Barrymore will all have to look for new vehicles.

ANOTHER NOTCH -:- JUST FOR CHANGE -:- SHE'S NO RUIN

Tim Holt, bold bad man, makes 'nuther redskin bite the dust. Tim is a son of Jack Holt, Paramount featured player, and he plays a part in "The Vanishing Pioneer," in which his father plays the leading role.

Richard Jarvis, Jack Ponder, Jack Stone, George Fitzmaurice, director; Colleen Moore and Stewart Knox, standing; Cleve Moore, in the cockpit. Cleve is a brother of Colleen. They're just having a little fun between scenes of Miss Moore's picture, "Lilac Time," said fun being to keep the cameraman grinding.



Thelma Todd hasn't lost her arms, like the Venus of Milo. That's just a magic trick of the movie studio, in which Miss Todd has been working in the photoplay, "Vamping Venus."

Convention Day by Day

By O. O. M'INTYRE

HOUSTON, Tex., June 27.

TO BE awakened at 4 a. m. by a dinky little band that ran out of wind or something and expired on a whirligig note is bad enough, but to have a shaving brush with a lead handle fall eleven stories from a window ledge to the street approaches the calamitous.

Any moment I am expecting the constabulary to knock on the door and inform me the passing pedestrian, just removed to the morgue, was somebody like Jim Reed or Mayor Walker.

To slip a tight-fitting cap on a morning of climaxes there was the incident of locking a trunk lid on the southeastern section of my coattail and dragging it across the room to telephone for help.

Some people would have thought of slipping out of the coat, but I'm not the type.

Yet I arrived at Convention Hall as is my wont, all merry and bright and ready to do my bit in making history. In fact, I expect to be a bigger help here than I was in Kansas City.

Will Rogers' seat is next to mine and if there was ever a flibbertygibberty guy he is it. His jaws snap 100 times to the minute and when he is not wiggling his feet he is shifting from one hip to the other or rolling a lead pencil between his palms. I wasn't there a half hour before he had worked me into a spell of the jerks. Soon I expect I'll be picking imaginary things off myself.

"If you can't sit still, go on home," I finally told him.

"Go powder your spate," was his smart aleck reply.

The convention hall here somehow reminds you of one of those beautiful but rather gaudy structures you see at a World's Fair. It is only within a few minutes walk of all the leading downtown hotels and it seems to me the handling of tickets has been capable, although it will probably just be my luck for a ticket scandal to break out.

Every lawn in the neighborhood of the hall is dotted with soft drink stands where hopeful young merchants with their lemonade and ginger pop expects to become rich over night.

At Hospitality House the overflow sits on comfortable green benches under a battery of several hundred fans and a roof, soundproofed with celotex, and listens to the convention via the radio. Hospitality House is the only thing I have seen entirely original in conventions for a number of years.

Those who believe that political conventions should be held only in New York and Chicago are not doing much yapping down here. Houston up to the moment of writing this has done a first-rate job of handling the biggest crowd in its history. * * *

Bassett Blakely, one of the picturesque ranchmen hereabouts, is the impresario of a rodeo that is thrilling the crowds between history-making. He has brought all the bronco busters from Oklahoma, Wyoming and other wild and wooly states as his contribution to the gaiety. My idea of nice clean fun would be to see New York's dapper little mayor on a fiery mustang riding Hell for Breakfast to bulldog a steer.

I have never seen much of a fig boy. Figs never got much of a foothold in our home. We were roundsteak people. But everywhere you go in Texas they offer you a fig. They have them preserved in cream, cake, candy, soda water and the nude. What the praline is to New Orleans, the fig is to Texas. And one ought to be able right here to whittle a wheeze out, figuratively speaking, or something, like that.

Between sessions today Mike Hogg and Bill Dunning and me went for a buggy ride in an aeroplane. Leaving Houston at two o'clock we were in Galveston 20 minutes later. At least they told me it was Galveston, but I just took a quick peek. I don't look out over the sides of aeroplanes well. Arriving back in Houston a half hour later I went immediately to a restaurant. I seemed to need another lunch.

Most people are making their home-going reservations now for Friday, which would indicate they think it will be all over, but shouting and nominating a Vice-President by Thursday night. But they had that same notion in New York several years ago.

A convention is over when it is over. I'm not much good as a political reporter—and will the gentleman who sneered, "we all know," leave the hall quietly—but I do know that. We may be here until Christmas, Heaven forbid.

CORNS

Calluses are ended now—pain stops in 3 seconds

GETS-IT

SCIENCE has perfected new methods in ending corns and callus spots.

You touch the most painful corn with this amazing liquid which acts like a local anaesthetic. The pain stops in less than 3 seconds.

Then soon the corn begins to shrivel up and loosen. You peel it off with your fingers. The whole corn is gone. Works on any kind of corn or callus. Ask your druggist for "Gets-It." Quick results are guaranteed.

NEW FELTS From England

A Great Showing Tomorrow, at $7.50 and $10.00

England always could be depended upon for the quality of her felts, and now that she has learned, from American purchasers like Horne's, that women on this side insist upon chic, spirited felt hats with a bit of novelty, she has turned from her conservative ways and given us some really dashing hats.

This vast collection is a good example. Hats in which two and three shades are smartly combined, hats with effective applications of contrasting color, hats with two and three-color bands, hats tucked in swirl effects, hats stitched with silver, hats cut away at the back to accommodate fur-collared coats.

They may be had in shades to match one's sweaters, sports outfits or travel coats.

Women Are Asking for Three Light Shades in Sheer Summer Dresses

Flesh, white and orchid are shades for which we have had so many inquiries recently, in sheer, simple afternoon dresses, and the section of women's finer dresses has just received a new group of georgette ones, priced $39.50, to meet this demand.

There are several one and two-piece models, some with tier skirts, some with straight pleated skirts, frocks with finishes of fagoting, with pleated frills relieving the plainness of blouses, with scarf collars of self fabric, and sometimes the softening touch of a dainty scallop-embroidered vestee.

Besides the sheer dresses, there are, at the same price, ensembles of flat crepe in the same shades, consisting of youthful two-piece dress and hip-length jacket.

.... Horne's, Second Floor ....

Little Boys' Wash Suits

Special, 95c

Choice of six boyish Flapper or Button-on styles ... all well tailored and neatly finished.

The flapper models are designed for wear with or without the belt. They are made of broadcloth ... some with colored shorts and white tops ... others all white trimmed with colored bands ... and still others, in colors trimmed with polka dot or printed bands.

Button-on styles have white broadcloth tops and colored chambray shorts.

Both styles in sizes 2 to 6 years.

Sheer Printed Frocks For Big or Little Girls

Look to Your Furs Before Your Trip

Through forgetfulness, fur coats and fur-trimmed coats hanging in one's closet, may be left to a sad fate during the summer vacation period. Take this as a reminder to have us call for them and put them safely away in our New Scientific Cold Storage Vaults, before you leave town.

Telephone us, Court 3000, and ask for Fur Storage.

MEDITATIONS of a MARRIED WOMAN

by HELEN ROWLAND

WHEN A MAN WON'T

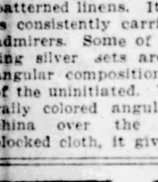
WHEN you start out on a motor trip with a woman at the wheel, you know that you will GET there, provided her breath holds out.

* * *

But when you start out for a strange destination with a man at the wheel, it is all a delightful guessing game! If you wind up anywhere within 40 miles of your objective, YOU win!

* * *

This is because a man would sooner die clutching his road-map than to ASK the WAY! For some deep, dark, unfathomable reason, a man would rather be caught stealing sheep or cutting his own hair than to lower his morale by admitting that he is on the wrong road! It would break his spirit!



HELEN ROWLAND

A woman seldom bothers to take a road map. She hasn't any time to study one, and anyhow she is too busy asking QUESTIONS! She can go farther, straighter and quicker on a powder puff and the strength of her own voice than a man can on seven road maps.

* * *

To a man, a policeman is something to "get past;" but to a woman, a policeman is just somebody to answer questions. She often stops and asks his "advice" about the roads, even when she knows them by heart. Why WASTE a perfectly good policeman?

* * *

But a man will go miles out of his way rather than DEMEAN himself by admitting that a blue hat and coat give any other man the authority to TELL him anything. When it comes to "advice," he believes firmly that it is better to give than to receive—and that's his guiding principle!

* * *

Many a woman has driven half a day beside a graven image with sealed lips and a famished look in his eyes as he swept haughtily past filling stations, drug stores, intelligent looking people and scores of traffic cops—only to discover that he was off the road!

* * *

YOU know how it is! He will argue about it; park the car and try to "figure it out;" turn around, detour and retrace—but never, never will he give it up and INQUIRE!

* * *

Only when a man is hopelessly lost and beaten, and the woman beside him is weeping for food, is he reduced to that state of exhaustion and humility where he is willing to expose his ignorance and admit that he is willing to take a stranger's advice.

* * *

But if you love him, never drive him to it! Never shatter a man's superiority complex by making him truckle to a traffic officer or admit that there is something that he doesn't KNOW!

ALONE AT LAST! -:- -:- By Fanny Darrell

© 1928, by Newspaper Feature Service, Inc. Great Britain rights reserved.

FAR from the madding crowd—far from the glances of unwelcome intruders—the lovers have found their retreat. With this friendly moon for cheer, and the trees for shelter, they are content to remain forever, basking in the warmth of each other's love, reveling in the glory of each other's confidence.

Alone at last! Free at last! Free to gaze into each other's eyes and read the message of hope and faith and joy there written. For here, at last, can love's young dream flower into fulfillment.. Here the shy young Romeo gains courage to speak the lovely truth. Beneath the benevolent moon he does not fear rebuff.

And the pretty loved one—she, too, throws off the cloak of shyness in this wilderness retreat. She stretches forth her flower-like hand and beckons Cupid near. She rests her head so tenderly upon her lover's breast, and sighs in peaceful tranquillity. For here at last, alone at last, are two at last—who will some day be one.

Causes of a Common Ill Among Babies

AMONG the common afflictions of infancy are frequent attacks of vomiting. One of the easiest things for an infant to do is to expel the contents of the stomach.

DR. COPELAND

In the experience of the average adult, vomiting is unusual. But the healthiest of babies may suffer frequently from this symptoms.

When I use the word "suffer" in this connection, I do not mean that pain is invariably present, because it isn't. As a matter of fact, the youngster throws up part of the contents of the stomach and then resumes its nursing as if nothing had happened. The act of expulsion is without effort or apparent discomfort.

Getting the child into the wrong position, or pressing on its stomach may cause vomiting. The milk or other food is returned without change.

There are a number of causes. They relate chiefly to the manner of feeding. Too rapid nursing or overfeeding—one of these is likely to be the chief cause of the disturbance. The stomach may be filled with air which has been swallowed in greedy nursing.

There is another form of vomiting that is not wholly understood. I refer to what is called "periodical" or "recurrent vomiting." Without apparent cause, severe attacks occur at quite regular periods.

Personally, I am inclined to believe that these attacks are really traceable to wrong food or to wrong feeding. Contaminated food or some temporary failure in its purity may be responsible.

Of course, there are vomiting spells which are much more serious than the mild and occasional symptoms I have mentioned. Sometimes there develops a more or less serious disturbance of the stomach.

Then we have a mark d difference in the vomited material. It is changed a lot from the original food. There may be mucus, bile and even blood in the expelled substance.

In the beginning of some acute illness it is not unusual to observe a vomiting attack. Indeed that may be the very first symptom.

Worms in the intestinal tract are likely to produce so much irritation that vomiting and other symptoms follow. In such cases the intestinal waste is likely to give evidence of the presence of worms.

When vomiting occurs, further feeding should stop A few hours without food will do no harm and will probably cause all the irritation to disappear In more serious and continued vomiting attacks, it may be necessary to reduce the feedings or to prohibit food for a longer period In such cases you will have a doctor, of course, and he will direct the treatment

If the attacks of slight vomiting are frequent, you must take advice regarding the food and also the way it is given the child. Correction of some slight mistake will remove the trouble.

Answers to Health Queries

M. D. S. Q.—My legs and thighs are too small for the rest of the body. What would you advise?

A.—Gaining weight in general will bring about results and any exercise which involves the muscles of the legs should also be helpful—running, climbing, dancing, skating, brisk walking, etc.

C. C. Q.—What will remove brown moles from the face and neck?

A.—Small moles may be removed by the electric needle. The X-ray, radium and dioxide snow have been successfully employed in getting rid of moles. All these methods of treatment should be applied by a physician who is expert in their use.

Modern Table Decoration

HOUSEWIVES are becoming aware of the importance of modern table decoration. The size of the table, the formality of the meal, the linens and china used, govern the style of decoration.

Colored linens, for instance, call for matching china, flowers and candles. The Cubist china and silver are used with the Cubist patterned linens. It is a fad, but is consistently carried out by its admirers. Some of the new sterling silver sets are bewildering angular compositions to the eye of the uninitiated. Used with the gaily colored angularly designed china over the striped and blocked cloth, it gives one a sort of brainstorm until one gets used to it. The candles are likely to be square and decorated to match the china, and the flowers usually used are artificial, china, glass, beads, wood pulp, feather or china. Of course, this table is the extreme example of he fad.

Over the damask cloth, which is used for formal occasions, the center piece may be a fruit bowl of salt glaze, four candlesticks to match with rectangular flower boxes or urns of the same china, used between the candlesticks. The little flower holders may be filled with pansies, violets or any of the low-growing flowers. With salt glaze service plates, and the flat silver for five courses laid, the white, gold decorated, candles and the white, gold decorated dishes, complete this formal table. Crystal glasses are used and gold and white place cards are laid across the folded napkins.

For those who like color and a less formal dinner arrangement, try the linen with the wide blue border, the blue decorated china, candlesticks to match and holding tall blue candles, and a flower bowl of the china filled with blue corn flowers. Dainty shaded blue glass tumblers that look like flowers may be used and the necessary flat silver laid. Little lace baskets filled with candied mint and rose leaves may have a blue and white place card attached.

A buttercup table is charming with the yellow linens, white and gold, or the yellow china, yellow candles, a brass bowl filled with buttercups and yellow painted butterfly place cards.

Horoscope

Thursday, June 28

A RATHER routine day may be expected, judging by the fairly negative reign of the planets shaping the affairs and prospects. Application, diligence and steadfastness to the requirements of the daily grind are sure to bring eventual reward and fitting compensations. In personal connections there may be small annoyances, worries or inharmonies.

Those whose birthday it is may look for a rather routine year, with things moving along in accustomed grooves, but full of promise for diligence and perseverance even in irksome situations. Personal matters may encounter trifling annoyances or inharmonies unless properly safeguarded.

A child born on this day will be patient, plodding and persevering and will get its satisfactions in life by these industrious qualities.

It is not the first mile post, but the last that tells the story.

FOR THE LOVELORN

Two Small Town Girls

DEAR MISS GALE:

We are two girls who read your wonderful advice to others every evening, and have decided to come to you for advice upon our own affairs.

Miss Gale, we agree absolutely with you on the petting and smoking question. As for drinking, we consider that far below even mentioning. No. 1 has blue eyes and No 2 brown. Our types look well together and we are extremely popular with the opposite sex. We specially are proud of being "darn good sports." We find that it isn't necessary to lower ourselves in order to be popular.

Now, Miss Gale, this is our trouble. Being constantly together, it is about the same. Of course we have "double dates." Not long ago we met two boy friends who were just as good friends as we are. These boys seemed to really like us. They asked to come up to see us and we agreed. Although we live very close, No. 1 is not allowed to have company at home and all our friends come to No. 2's home. The boys came up and we enjoyed the evening very much. Before they left they asked to come up again. They came back about four evenings and then on the last evening, when they left, they only said, "We'll see you again." They live in the same town as we do, Miss Gale; we see them quite a bit. When we are together they merely speak, but if No. 1 happens to meet her boy friend alone they talk freely even if the two boys are together. The same with No. 2. Miss Gale, we can't understand this. Can it be that they are trying to break up our friendship? We would both rather give up the boys forever than to give one another up, although we dearly love them.

Miss Gale, what shall we do? We are not lonesome while waiting, for there are lots of other fellows, but not the ones we want.

Wishing you all the success in the world and hoping to see a reply soon.

TWO SMALL-TOWN GIRLS.

Their conduct is rather peculiar, isn't it? Apparently, though, they don't expect to call on you again, so why not try to forget them. Your own friendship is worth much more to you than theirs.

Curious

DEAR MISS GALE:

We are two girls of 15 years. We each have fellows. One of them is 18 and the other 20. They are brothers, and were born in Germany. They want us to marry them and go across to Germany. If we don't they will go anyway. Please don't say we are too young and to forget them because it is impossible. We love them too much. We smoke and pet very much, but agree with you about the drinking. Hoping for the best we are CURIOUS.

You are years too young to be thinking of marriage. Forget these boys.

BANISHED HER LIVER TROUBLE

McKees Rocks Lady Says Ten Herbs Made Great Change; Stomach Distress Gone.

"Of all the endorsements for Ten Herbs I have read, not one gives your medicine its just dues," was the statement of Mrs. Barbara Slezak, 304 Catherine Street, McKees Rocks, Pa., (near Pittsburgh).

MRS. BARBARA SLEZAK to the Ten Herbs Man, who is at May's Main Store, 529 Liberty Avenue, Pittsburgh, where he is daily demonstrating this celebrated herbal compound. "I myself feel that I cannot express in words what Ten Herbs has done for me," Mrs. Slezak continued.

"I was in such a weak, run-down condition that my lips were the color of white chalk. I was so nervous that I would jump at the least noise. My hands would shake, and I never slept well at night—would roll and toss by the hour. My liver was sluggish. I was bilious and had dizzy spells. At times I could hardly stand up, and when I stooped over everything in front of me would be black. Although I was careful what I ate, gas would form, and I would bloat and belch; and my heart would palpitate. My kidneys caused pains across my back, and in the morning I would be so stiff I could hardly arise.

"I tried all kinds of medicines, but it was only when a friend induced me to try Ten Herbs that I got any results. The very first bottle made a change for the better, and seemed to put new life and strength in my body. Ten Herbs is making a new woman of me. My liver and kidneys are working fine. My complexion has cleared, and I am getting color in my cheeks. Biliousness and dizzy spells have left me, and so have the pains across my back. I have a better appetite and have no fear of misery after eating—no more gas, belching, or heart palpitation. My nerves are stronger and my hands do not shake. What a glorious feeling it is to arise feeling rested and refreshed in the morning."

The Ten Herbs Man is at May's Main Store, 529 Liberty Avenue, Pittsburgh, where he is daily meeting the public and explaining the merits of this medicine.

How To Be Beautiful
by Maria Jeritza

The Exquisite Complexion

SLOWLY, month after month, year after year, "little cell on little cell," is the way an exquisite complexion is built up. It is very hard for many women to realize this fact. They want a beautiful skin at once—overnight—and cannot understand why the contents of some bottle or tube of cosmetics should not prove the secret of beauty for which they are searching, provided they find the right brand.

MARIA JERITZA

With this vain hope women try one cosmetic after another — liquid powders, vanishing cream, astringents, skin foods—selecting them not so much because of actual, tested suitability, as in response to a dazzling advertisement, or because some acquaintance found the preparation satisfactory.

If your skin is broken out, badly blotched—or, for that matter, if your scalp has an eruption—I do not suggest that you try the marvelous preparations you see advertised without first consulting a skin expert. These lotions and creams may be—most of them are—exactly the right thing for skins of a certain type. But serious skin eruptions are not for the amateur experimenter, or even a beauty expert to treat. Go to a registered physician who specializes in treatment of the skin or scalp, as the case may be. Let him examine you, diagnose your case. Follow his advice scrupulously, exactly, not for a day or two, but until the unhealthful condition disappears. Then, remembering that health is beauty, and beauty is health, proceed to keep and enhance the loveliness of your complexion by healthful measures.

Cold cream, skin tonics, powders, even paint are good in their place, but they must be used wisely, not misused, in order to bring beauty.

Nearly every woman looks better with a little powder on her face, applied evenly, to remove the shiny look that results from too much moisture. The important thing is to choose the right powder, or a hue that matches your skin; apply it evenly, lightly, on absorbent cotton or a clean puff, and remove it every night with cold cream.

A medium skin, neither very light nor olive, calls for powder of "naturelle" shade. This is the average American complexion, and it includes the slightly florid skin that often accompanies red-haired, gray-eyed beauty.

A woman with an olive skin needs powder in rachel tint. Flesh is the correct hue for a youthful, pink-tinted complexion, while the exceptional woman with a white skin would choose, of course, white powder. But white skins are most unusual and white powder looks very dreadful daubed over a nose that calls for flesh or naturelle.

Strive for the natural look. Examine your face carefully after powdering in the same light in which the powder will be worn. Select a powder light in texture if your skin is naturally thin. Rice powder is pure. The saleswoman will help you select a powder not too heavy for your skin. Too heavy powder sinks in and chokes the pores.

For a powder foundation some women use an astringent or vanishing cream with success. Other types of skin do not react well to astringent and vanishing creams. These require a mild liquid astringent, or even softened cold water as a powder base.

The best way to blend powder rouge is to apply it on an old-fashioned rabbit's foot, which can be bought in any drug store. Do not use lip or facial rouge unless you really need them.

If you keep your health perfect apply powder and rouge sparingly.

HOW, WHEN and WHY

Why drug the stomach when your blood cells control high blood pressure and most all chronic diseases?

How Blood Cell Protein Serum controls your health, your happiness, your bank account and your wealth, is by increasing the number of white cells (or leucocytes).

One Serum makes an optimist of the most skeptical.

One Serum revives hope in the most despondent sufferer.

One Serum brings a ray of sunshine into any blood stream infected.

One Serum makes new white blood cells, increasing the patient's own natural weapons against disease, chronic or acute.

One Serum accomplishes more real good than many patients expect or medicine can produce.

35,000 people have taken these Serums in Pittsburgh. If this one fact has been verified, there is no just reason for you to suffer from high or low blood pressure or any chronic disease.

One full meal a day is all a great many people need, while others require three or four. If we can tell you what your blood pressure is today from one drop of blood, or just how many white cells you have to govern and regulate your pressure, you should recognize that laws govern facts and you don't have to be misguided.

While you live in the cleanest and healthiest City in the United States and have fewer deaths per capita, one out of three die from complications of blood pressure. Senator Copeland's (former Health Commissioner of New York City) deduction is that one out of three die from this complication.

Why drug the stomach when your blood cells control High Blood Pressure and most all Chronic Diseases?

If you balance the blood stream and increase the Oxygen of the body, correcting faulty metabolism, you have quick relief, not only from pain but from all diseases affecting the blood stream. Think it over and take one. No Doctor charges. Patients pay only for the particular Serum the Doctor administers. Come on, you High Blood Pressure Men—get well and go back to work.

EXAMINATION OF BLOOD AND URINE FREE

One Serum gives relief in many cases. Patients pay for Serum only—No Doctor Charge.

We are successfully treating High Blood Pressure, Rheumatism, Asthma, Diabetes, Anemia, Neuritis, Nervous or Stomach Troubles, Debility, Kidney and Heart Trouble, Paralysis, Arthritis, Sclerosis, Blood and Skin Diseases and other ailments affecting the blood stream.

PATRICIA PITT'S SPRIGHTLY COMMENT ON PITTSBURGH'S SOCIAL HAPPENINGS

Conventions and Weather Fail to Halt Bridal Procession as Weddings of Note Are Solemnized

CONVENTIONS may come, and conventions may go, but weddings go on forever. And society is still paying a lot of attention to marriages of note in spite of the activities at Houston and in spite of the weather. For weddings, just as well as conventions, are held even if the weather isn't particularly comfortable. And the brides of yesterday were ahead of the delegates in Texas—they had no cause to complain of the weather. It didn't even rain!

So Virginia Corbus Patterson, daughter of the Harry H. Pattersons, was one of the few brides of this June, characterized by the showers usually associated with temperamental April, to wed on a fair day.

Virginia looked pretty yesterday didn't you think, when she became the bride of Murray Bell Grimes, son of William Dermit Grimes, of South Negley avenue, at 5:30 o'clock in the Sixth United Presbyterian Church? The Rev. Dr. Harry H. Forsyth, by the way, was the officiant.

Virginia, who was given in marriage by her father, was gowned in Alencon lace, fashioned with long, tight sleeves and a train of lace. Her veil of tulle was arranged with a bandeau of lace and pearls and was showered with orange blossoms. Her flowers were lilies of the valley, bouvardia and silver wedding roses.

Mrs. William Booth and Mrs. Lewis W. Hicks, Jr., the matrons of honor, were distinctive in beige lace gowns over peach satin, and horsehair hats of peach trimmed with blue velvet ribbons. They carried Johanna Hill roses and delphinium, tied with blue velvet and maline.

The bridesmaids wore peach-colored frocks, too, but peach-colored velvet ribbons fluttered from their horsehair hats of the same shade. They had a touch of blue, though, for delphinium and roses fashioned their bouquets.

And the bridesmaids were Luella Marshall, Harriet Patterson, Ann Watt and Virginia Wilson.

The ushers were William Booth, of Sewickley; Hal C. Patterson, Lewis W. Hicks, Jr., and Nevin Booth, of this city, and Nelson Plum, Herbert Sanford and Charles Robins, of New York.

Mrs. Patterson, Virginia's mother, wore a gown of green chiffon and lace.

There was a reception, you know, at the Longue Vue Club. And the young Mr. and Mrs. Grimes will spend their honeymoon in that ever-fascinating city, Paris, I hear.

SATURDAY is always a popular wedding day, and an important wedding of this coming Saturday will be that, you may have guessed, of Martha Green, daughter of the Jonathan Sherman Greens, of St. James Place, who will marry Samuel Clarke Reed, Jr., son of the Samuel Clarke Reeds, of Murrayhill avenue, at 5 o'clock in the Calvary Episcopal Church. The wedding will be a small, though important one. Even at the reception to follow in the home of the bride's parents there will be only the immediate families and a few intimate friends. Small weddings have been rather typical of this season, don't you think?

Quite a few interesting entertainments have been given for Martha. Tonight Eleanor and Catherine Longnecker will give a dinner at the Fox Chapel Club. Clarissa Reed will give the rehearsal dinner Friday night in the Pittsburgh Golf Club.

Ellen McClay gave a luncheon in the past few days for Martha, Helen Murdock gave a bridge, you know, and Juliet Hillman entertained at a dinner dance.

THE members of the Woman's Auxiliary of the Allegheny General Hospital, which is sponsoring the Sewickley Kennel Club dog show to be given Saturday, beginning at 9:30 o'clock on the grounds of the Allegheny Country Club, are stoics, I believe. Knowing that they can't control the weather, they are going to ignore it. And the show will go on, I understand, whether it rains or not. The proceeds of the show, as you probably know, will be used for the social service work of the hospital.

At the entrance to the show you will see Mrs. William Christopher Robinson, chairman of the auxiliary. Mrs. Christian Ihmsen Shannon, treasurer of the auxiliary, is chairman of dogs, assisted by Mrs. Maitland Alexander, Mrs. J. Frederick Byers, Mrs. Percy Donner, Mrs. William Bacon Schiller, Mrs. Benjamin Franklin Jones III, and Mrs. Lewis Anderson Park.

Those society matrons who like to supervise the family marketing may do so at the dog show. For green vegetables, contributed from Sewickley Heights farms, will be sold by Mrs. Carroll Preston Davis, Mrs. Harvey Norton Van Voorhis, Mrs. Thomas A. McGinley, Mrs. Henry R. Rea, Mrs. Sidney Liggett and Priscilla Brown.

ANOTHER wedding marked yesterday—was that of Lida Brickell Repp, daughter of the Robert M. Repps, and Dr. Edward Harper Rynearson, of Rochester, Minn., son of Dr. and Mrs. Edward Rynearson, of Howe street. They were married in the Christ Methodist Episcopal Church by the Rev. Dr. Albert E. Day.

Insets of rose point lace trimmed the white satin gown worn by the bride, with the full court train lined with flesh-colored brocade. Rose point lace edged her tulle veil and her flowers were white roses and lilies of the valley.

A bouffant frock of green taffeta with a large yellow taffeta bow on the left side was most becoming to Martha Cooper, the maid of honor. And the bridesmaids' frocks were of yellow taffeta, in the same style, with large bows of green taffeta at the left side. They all had dresden bouquets. Eleanor Baton, Eloise Wilson, Agnes Bane, Sally Rawstorne, Mary Thompson and Virginia Rossell were the bridesmaids. Mary Josephine Walton made a charming flower girl.

Sylvester Rynearson was his brother's best man, and Robert Repp, Jr., the bride's brother; Dr. Edward Williams, Dr. John Garden and William W. King, of Jackson, Mich.; Dr. Scott Oehrle, of Monongahela, and Dr. Warren Wilkins, of Toronto, Canada, were the ushers.

After the wedding there was a reception and a wedding supper in the Repp home.

THE marriage of Miss Dorothy M. Hulem, daughter of E. H. Hulem, of Edgewood, and Raynor J. SUN-TELE PLANS VETS' PICNIC

The annual war veterans' picnic heretofore held by the Pittsburgh Sun, will be staged this year by The Sun-Tele!

Arrangements were completed today to hold this affair, one of the high spots of the summer for war veterans, at Kennywood Park on Saturday, August 25. The guests of The Sun-Tele will be men and women who were in any branch of the service, or still are, and convalescent veterans in hospitals, who will be escorted to the park. The veterans' wives also are invited.

Coupons entitling the vets to free tickets to the park amusements will be printed in The Sun-Tele later.

Brady McSwigan, manager of the park, announced today that park officials are ready and anxious to welcome the veterans. Among the attractions already lined up for August 25, Mr. McSwigan said, are the Flying Malzaros, of circus fame, Izzy Cervone's Legion Band and a puppet show.

TRINITY GIRLS KEEP UP ACTIVITIES IN SUMMER

Three nights a week are devoted to an indoor golf school in which a class of 75 participates, and on Saturday the first of a series of hikes will be held, others to follow fortnightly. Saturday's party will start from Stanwix street and Duquesne way at 2 o'clock. Miss Georgiana Fawcett is in charge of summer activities, including the picnic for which she has arranged athletic contests as the entertainment features.

JUBILEE NEARS, LAST CHANCE FOR TICKETS

Time's getting short now. Next Tuesday at National Amusement Park, above Aspinwall, will be The Sun-Tele's big jubilee and the last jubilee coupon is printed in the paper today. If you haven't yet filled out your coupon in requesting a ticket, clip it and send it today. It's your last chance.

No tickets can be sent after tomorrow. It will be necessary to send your coupon right now in order that it may be received at The Sun-Tele office in Thursday's mail.

Fifty thousand boys and girls in the great Sun-Tele family will be there. Tickets are being sent out by the thousands and in order that Uncle Sam's mail carriers will not be over-burdened, it is necessary to close up all mailing of tickets at least three days in advance of the outing.

The ticket with its 14 coupons is really a directory to the amusements which all the boys and girls and their chaperons will enjoy—free. Don't forget the ice cream, the French vanilla bar, Reinhold's "cream of the valley" and the balloon.

But most important of all, keep in mind that this is the last time the coupon will appear in The Sun-Telegraph. Send your coupon and prepare for the greatest day of your lives.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

Something Happens

By L. LAMAR MATTHEWS

JUDITH BASKIN lived with her grandmother in a cottage that stood in the center of a deserted "subdivision" three miles from Boomtown.

"Oh, I wish something would happen!" the girl sighed as she stood one evening outside the door. "It has only been six months since I came home from college and it seems six years."

"When that Davis comes to foreclose the mortgage on our land, I guess that will furnish you a little excitement," replied her grandmother.

"Do you think he will foreclose?" the girl cried. "Why, this property is worth $50,000 and Daddy only borrowed $5,000."

"It was worth $50,000," corrected the old woman, "but that was during the boom. Right now, you couldn't sell it for 50 cents. Anyway, Davis seems pretty keen to take it over."

"What are we going to do?" the girl demanded.

"Lose it, just as we have lost everything else," answered Mrs. Baskin. "First the bottom drops out of real estate; then your father's illness and death and now the mortgage is taking the home from over our heads."

At that moment a terrific crash startled the women into silence. Judith rushed to the front of the house to see what manner of catastrophe had come upon them.

On the ground lay the limp body of a young man. Half way out from the shattered roof, the rear end of a plane extended. The flyer had ventured too near the earth, and his plane had crashed through the top of the cottage. The whole building, except the kitchen and the shed room, was wrecked.

"I'm going to call a doctor," declared Judith. And she set out in the face of her grandmother's protests. "It is half mile to the nearest telephone," cried the old woman in alarm. "you can't go that distance alone, in the dark."

But Judith was already on her way. Shortly thereafter she was telling Dr. Simms that he must come at once.

Finally the doctor arrived and did all that could be done for the injured man.

"He can't be moved yet," the doctor stated as he left. "Tomorrow we may be able to take him to a hospital. And from there he will likely go to jail."

"Why jail?" demanded Judith.

"The whole country will know about the accident tomorrow and some charge will certainly be brought against him for such wanton disregard of public safety."

"The idea of putting an injured man in jail!" exclaimed Grandmother.

"They shall not!" Judith declared.

Just how she was to prevent the arrest of the handsome young aviator she didn't know; but she determined to save him somehow.

That night Mrs. Baskin slept on an improvised bed in the kitchen, while Judith sat beside their patient.

About daybreak Holt Barnes opened his eyes and stared at the girl.

"I thought I was dead," he said. "Would you mind holding on to me? I'm afraid I'll slip back."

She caught his hand and held it, while she spoke to him in the soothing tones one uses to a sick child.

"You are an angel," he whispered, and again lapsed into unconsciousness.

The news of the accident spread; and early next morning people began to gather around the cottage; but no one was admitted. Grandmother saw to that. About 10 o'clock she rushed into the kitchen where Judith was trying to rest.

"I see the sheriff's car coming down the road," she said. "Do you suppose he is going to arrest this poor lad?"

"We must hide him," stated the girl.

"In the cellar, added grandmother.

Judith lifted the wide trap door that led down to the cellar beneath the kitchen. Then she caught one end while grandmother seized the other end of the small mattress on which the aviator lay. Together they managed to ease him down into the shallow cellar beneath the kitchen floor.

They had just closed the trap door and pulled the linoleum over that, when the sheriff's car stopped outside.

"You'll have to do the talking, Judy," said Mrs. Baskin, "I never could lie with a straight face."

"I can," answered Judith. And she did.

So successfully did she lie that the sheriff went away marveling at the rapid recovery of the flier.

When he was gone the trap-door was opened, and Judith saw that her patient had regained consciousness. He was regarding her with questioning eyes and she explained just what had happened.

"You had better stay where you are today," she concluded. "We may have other inquisitive callers."

That afternoon Barnes asked her to send a telegram for him. "I want you to wire my buddy to come after me," he said. Then he dictated a code message that was to be sent to Ray Kendrick in Pensacola.

Judith walked a mile to the nearest car line and went into Boomtown to send the message.

Ray Kendrick came and found his pal in a cheerful mood, considering his hard luck.

"I don't mind lying in a nice, friendly cellar," Holt told him, "but I be dog-gone if I am going to languish in anybody's jail."

"How much of you is broken?" asked Ray.

"Nothing but one arm and two ribs," was the answer. "I was stunned at first, but an angel smiled at me and I came to."

"Well, let's go," said Kendrick and he lifted his friend into the ambulance in which he had arrived.

The week that followed seemed the longest, lonesomest time Judith had ever spent. The image of Holt's face insisted upon bobbing up before her. The sound of his voice, the look in his eyes, the pull of his personality followed her, stayed with her, haunted her. She loved him. That was the truth. And somehow she knew that he loved her.

Then one day the postman brought two letters. Judith's was from Holt Barnes.

Grandmother's was a communication from a law firm offering her a tremendous sum for her property.

She read it aloud with little gasps and gurgles.

"I don't know what they want with it," she declared, "but they can certainly have it."

Another thing that she did not know was that it was Holt Barnes' lawyers who made the offer.

"Now you can go back to college, Judith," exclaimed Grandmother. Then she turned and saw the girl kissing the letter she held in her hand.

"What's the matter with you, child?" exclaimed Mrs. Baskin. "You are not even listening to me. I said you could go back to college."

"I don't want to go back to college," Judith answered, and there was exultation in her voice and radiance in her face. "I'm going to marry Holt Barnes."

BIG STRAW VOTE ON MACHINES

With interest continuing unabated, a heavy ballot was rolled up yesterday on the six voting machines used by The Sun-Telegraph in gathering a straw vote on the Hoover or Smith for President question.

All day long crowds surged about the machines, in The Sun-Tele want ad corner at Fifth avenue and Market street, in the Jenkins Arcade and in the Pennsylvania Railroad depot, eagerly checking their favorite candidate and performing the simple operation that recorded their vote on the machine.

In the William Penn, Fort Pitt and Roosevelt hotels the machines created lively interest. Today the East Liberty sentiment will be sampled, with a voting machine located in the lobby of the Highland Building, South Highland avenue, at the head of Baum Boulevard. On subsequent days the machines will be placed in prominent positions in various parts of the city and suburbs in order to get a liberal cross-section of community preference.

Interest in the straw vote is divided between a desire to express sentiment as between Hoover and Smith and try the voting machines. It was noted particularly that many women showed keen concern in voting, and operated the machines with as much business-like manner as the men.

Each of the machines is in charge of a young woman who explains the simplicity and ease of the machine, and explains the purpose of the straw vote. The Sun-Telegraph is showing the sentiment of as many people as possible in connection with the presidential election.

Results recorded by the machines follow:

AUTOMOBILE NEWS

A. A. A. AT CINCINNATI

BIG LEGISLATIVE PROGRAM PLANNED

CINCINNATI, June 27.—The 1,054 motor clubs affiliated with the American Automobile Association opened their twenty-sixth annual convention here today for a four-day session.

As a result of the big increase in membership and due to the fact that close to 200 new motor clubs were established in the last year under A. A. A. auspices, officials of the national motoring body predicted today that the meeting here will break all records in point of attendance, with every section of the United States and Canada represented.

While the sessions of the convention are being held at Hotel Gibson, the Cincinnati Automobile Club, one of the largest motor clubs in the A. A. A. chain, is host to the convention.

In addition to the formulation of a comprehensive platform of motoring policies in preparation for the meeting of 43 state legislatures next year, the convention will elect a president, seven vice presidents, an executive committee, a secretary, a treasurer and one-third of the members of the board of directors. The latter consists of 85 members, 75 of them representing automobile clubs and 10 representing the bus division of the A. A. A., which is holding its annual meeting here at the same time as the parent organization.

The convention is scheduled to take up some of the outstanding problems confronting motordom today, including compulsory automobile insurance, the advisability of a strong driver's license law, the mounting rate of motor vehicle taxation, and the crying need for a national, continuing, unified, safety program.

Fred C. Schatz, J. E. Roth, William J. Brant and George O. Yohe are representing the Automobile Club of Pittsburgh, member club of the A. A. A. chain, at the convention.

COMES HERE TO LEARN BIG CITY WAY

EVERYBODY GO!

Peter Shagin, chief traffic officer of Xenia, O., directs Pittsburgh traffic to study the "big city system" of keeping the streets free of pedestrian and vehicular congestion.

HELLO, CHIEF!

Inspector Ben Marshall of Traffic Police greets Traffic Officer Peter Shagin of Xenia, who is making a Good Will tour of eastern states to study traffic regulations. He is making the tour under the auspices of the American Automobile Association and the Greene County (Ohio) Auto Club. Traffic safety reminders are being presented pedestrians by Officer Shagin during his trip.

AROUND WORLD IN DODGE

Around the world in eight months in a Dodge Brothers touring car.

That's the schedule mapped out by Dr. E. D. Eybers, professor of philosophy in the University of South Africa, who is taking his wife and two children, aged 5 and 3, on the globe touring expedition. The family recently visited the Dodge Brothers factory in Detroit and continued to the west coast, where they sailed for Tokio.

The Eybers left Cape Town, South Africa, November 30, and expect to return there August 1. From Tokio their plans include an ocean trip to Shanghai and a motor trip to Canton. From Canton they will take the boat for India and then sail for Durban, on the African east coast. From Durban they will motor back to Cape Town.

FRENCH RACE TO TEST MEN

A race between the world's greatest automobile drivers, but all with exactly the same cars, is being organized by one of the leading automobile builders of France. The proposal is made to see what different men will do with the same automobile and to determine whether it is the car or the man that wins a race.

AUTOISTS COMMEND G. O. P. GOOD ROADS PLANK

SUM PLEDGED HELD NOT ENOUGH

Washington, June 27.—Commendation of the Republican party's plank on good roads, included in its pledge of principles at Kansas City, was voiced here today by J. Borton Weeks, president of the American Motorists' Association.

"The party, however, in pledging continuation of the $75,000,000 annual federal-aid appropriation, does not go far enough in that this sum is not a sufficient share of the federal government's contribution towards the construction of our national highway system," President Weeks declared.

"Automobile registrations are increasing approximately three times as fast as highways are being built, with the result that traffic conditions are becoming so congested in certain areas as to make the use of an automobile both unpleasant and economically unsound. It is a well established fact, that the nation pays for good roads whether it has them or not. The operation of an automobile over an unimproved highway is much more expensive than over an improved one."

A prediction that Congress, whether it be Republican or Democratic, must soon augment the federal-aid program and amend the act to permit improvement of secondary and faster construction of primary highways, was voiced by the motoring head.

BUICK HELPS FLYING HISTORY

CAR FOR TRANS-PACIFIC AVIATORS

This picture was snapped at Long Beach, Cal., just before the Southern Cross hopped off on its trans-Pacific flight. The Buick shown was the party's official car during preparations for the flight. Left to right are: Capt. E. Kingsford-Smith, chief pilot; C. T. P. Ulm, relief pilot; J. Lyon, navigator, and James Warner, radio operator.

STEAM HEATED ROAD PLANNED IN SIERRAS

A proposal has been made to heat 16 miles of high Sierra highway in Nevada by steam in winter so that snow cannot accumulate.

367 STREET RAILWAYS OPERATE 8,387 BUSES

Three hundred and sixty-seven electric railway companies operated 8,387 buses in 1927. There were 49 companies operating 264 buses over 482 miles of route in localities where electric service has been entirely abandoned. Two hundred and thirty-seven companies have substituted buses for 3,020 miles of track.

A spectroscope is being used at Mount Holyoke College to photograph engine knocks. The slightest impurities are detected when artificial rainbows are created in the cylinders.

BUICK SALES INCREASE

FLINT, Mich., June 27.—Buick sales for May exceeded those for April by almost 5,000 cars, C. W. Churchill, general sales manager of the Buick Motor Company, announced this week. The figure is taken from retail delivery reports, which reflect considerable improvement in business conditions practically everywhere in the country.

Mr. Churchill also made public a set of tables showing the dollar value of various makes of automobiles sold in the 12 months ending March 31, 1928. These tables indicate that the public paid $365,000,000 for Buick cars during that period, as compared with $250,000,000 for the cars of the second highest producer in the fine car field, and $221,000,000 for those of the third.

MOTION OF AUTO SNUBS BRAKES

As long as driving with the emergency brake set is a common habit with most of us, it might be of interest to explain why it is that most people who make this mistake manage to get about a half a block from their starting point before discovering their error.

A woman who recently started in this forgetful fashion said that the car seemed to run as usual in first and second. When she shifted to high, however, the machine commenced to slow down rapidly. It puzzled her to know why the brake did not assert its authority from the very start.

There were two reasons. One is that the engine is more powerful in the lower gears. The other is concerned with the brake itself. As the car moves the drum of the holding brake expands, thus making the brake hold firmer.

PARKING BAN SYDNEY PLAN

Public parking may be abandoned in Sydney, Australia, and both taxicabs and private cars may have to be kept in their own parking places. The suggestion has been made in an effort to relieve the present traffic muddle.

RAILROAD GIVES TAXI SERVICE

Free automobile service is provided by the Tasmanian government railways from the Hobart railroad station to any address within the city boundary. Luggage not exceeding 112 pounds in weight also is carried free. Passengers are invited to use the service and taxicab tickets are distributed before the train reaches Hobart.

BUS RIDES AVERAGE 25 FOR EACH IN U. S.

More than two and one-half billion passengers were carried in 1927 by buses, an average of over 25 rides during the year for every man, woman and child in the United States.

A PAVEMENT without a brick surface is like a tooth having no enamel

A BRICK surface is needed to complete the paving job. Brick, toughest, densest road material man makes, gives needed protection from traffic wear.

Being vitrified, brick is waterproof. That is important. Bound with asphalt it keeps moisture out of pavement; prevents costly damage and destruction.

By thus preserving the life of the softer pavement base, brick surface saves far more than its small cost.

In appearance brick surfaced pavements lend distinction to property. Laid to modern specifications they are smooth-riding; safe; easy on the eyes. Also they are by far the cheapest pavement in the end.

"The A.B.C. of Good Paving," a taxpayer's manual, tells in words and pictures how engineers today build ever-wearing, low cost, brick surfaced roads and streets. Address your request to National Paving Brick Manufacturers Association, 332 South Michigan Avenue, Chicago.

HOW 6 IN ITALIA BURNED TOLD

Backers Fined as Dance Derby Goes On

Irish Guest

TIMOTHY A. SMIDDY

When the Irish reunion, sponsored by the Ancient Order of Hibernians, is held in Kennywood Park Saturday, the honor guest will be Timothy A. Smiddy, Irish Free State envoy to the United States.

HOW ITALIA 6 BURNED TOLD

KINGS BAY, Spitzbergen, June 27.—(AP.)—Fear that six men, who drifted away in the balloon part of the Italia after its crash on the Polar ice cap, were dead prevailed today when it was learned that the airship had caught fire.

Of 16 men who left aboard the dirigible for the North Pole on May 23 only six were known to be alive today. One man was killed. Three have been missing since they started afoot for land.

Gen. Umberto Nobile said that soon after the dirigible crashed on May 25 the balloon part drifted to the east and a small column of smoke was seen rising from it after it had gone about 10 kilometers (about six miles). The balloon then crashed. Nothing has been heard of the six men aboard.

Returning from the North Pole on May 24 the Italia ran into fog, stormy weather and adverse winds. Fighting her way toward Kings Bay the dirigible at times was making a speed of less than 20 miles an hour.

CRASHES ON ICE

Suddenly, Nobile advised, on the morning of May 25 the airship was weighted down, apparently by snow and ice forming on the bag. The craft plunged rapidly to the Polar ice cap north of Northeastland. Nobile found it impossible to halt the rapid descent of the ship and it crashed.

Vincenzo Pomella, motor attendant, was in the stern gondola. It was ripped off in striking the ice, crushing Pomella. During the ensuing commotion he died.

The cabin and part of the upper bracing were also torn away. All those in the cabin were hurled to the ice. One of Gen. Nobile's legs was fractured and his back injured. One of the legs of Natale Ceccioni, motor chief, was broken below the knee. Dr. Finn Malmgren, Swedish meteorologist, received bad contusions of the arm. The others hurled to the ice were Lieut. Alfrdo Viglieri, Italian navy navigator; Prof. F. Behounek, meteorologist; Giuseppe Biagi, radio operator; Filippo Troiani, engineer; Capt. Alberto Mariano, pilot, and Capt. Filippo Zappi, Italian navy navigator.

FIND COMPANION'S BODY

Among the debris on the ice they found all the instruments in the cabin. Later the body of Pomella was found and buried in the ice.

In the meantime the balloon part of the Italia was drifting to the east, having been freed of the weight of the gondolas and part of the bracing. When it had gone about 10 kilometers a small column of smoke was seen rising from it. Nobile thought that either a gasoline or an oil tank had caught fire. The balloon crashed on the ice with its six occupants. These were Lieut. Ettore Arduino, Italian navy navigator; Prof. Aldo Pontremoli, Italian scientist; Dr. Ugo Lago, correspondent of the Milan newspaper Popolo d'Italia; Renato Allesandri, envelope attendant; Attileo Caratti, motor attendant, and Calisto Ciocca, motor attendant.

Every Morning Emily Finds A Box of Flowers From Kingdon Coles

"CLIMBED through the window, I s'pose." With another glance at Kitten. "Won't say where she was or who with. She's locked in her room and now I bet it'll be some time before she does any more stepping. Know anything about it, Kitten?"

Kitten's eyes were green abruptly. "Why should I? Dot don't tell me her troubles. Not the talking kind, I'll tell the world."

"Climbed through the window, I s'pose." With another glance at Kitten. "Won't say where she was or who with. She's locked in her room and now I bet it'll be some time before she does any more stepping. Know anything about it, Kitten?"

Kitten's eyes were green abruptly. "Why should I? Dot don't tell me her troubles. Not the talking kind, I'll tell the world."

"Maybe," Stella said wryly. "But Dot'll talk before she gets through with this. Got to go now."

She paused long enough to whisper to Emily. It was all right about Skeets, she said. She had seen him and they had made up.

"I'm so glad, dear. You're happy again? I hope it's for the best."

But Emily didn't believe it was. Stella was too restless to be happy. She'd never feel sure of Skeets.

Kitten watched and drew a long breath when Stella disappeared through the hedge. "Dot'll talk before she gets through with this," she had said. That kept knocking at her brain, sending icy trickles along her nerves.

What would happen when Dot began to talk?

For the first time in her blithe young life Kitten was afraid.

Three nights a week there was dancing at the Yacht Club and Frances had taken her guests there early, rather proud of the attention they attracted; two well-dressed, beautiful girls, shy-mannered and sweet, each so vividly distinctive.

The one all romance, pastel-shaded, exquisitely dainty with her pale fluff of hair and gray eyes shining; the other vital as a flame. Kitten wore the gown Emily's money had bought. It was shimmering emerald around her slim little figure and it brought out hot, exciting lights in her hair.

They lingered at the table and presently the orchestra came. Older people finished their dinners and went away and their places were taken by young folk who laughed and chattered and began to dance.

Through the glow which came to her when she felt herself touching, however casually, upon the world in which Kent Rossiter moved, Emily caught sight of a face she recognized. Bronzed skin, deep, intent eyes . . . Nicky Wickert sauntered over and sat down, uninvited, in the fourth place at the table.

"No use expecting me to hop around out there," Frances told him ungraciously. "You know I don't. And the girls aren't dancing tonight, either."

He flashed a half smile at Emily but she shook her head.

"It's that long since I've danced. Wouldn't know how to begin."

Frances, she saw, wasn't going to introduce him to Kitten who leaned forward with her lips parted, eyes shining. An awkward moment and Emily heard herself saying nervously, "Mr. Wickert, Kitten. My sister—"

He surveyed them with a pleased humor, ignoring Frances. "Little sister dances? Listen to that music!"

"Oh, yes!"

And they were out on the floor while Frances watched with her lips tight. She said, only, "That was unwise, Emily. You shouldn't have done that."

And when Kitten came back she signed the check and took the girls away, rather silently.

Kitten sulked a bit. But she had a thing to remember; a dark, handsome face bending down to hers, a low voice. A strange, persistent thrill rushing over her, a delicious sense of adventure. Ted never made her feel so.

"Been looking for you a long time, lamb child. Saw you once and I've been haunting that corner. But you never came."

She gave him a quick, teasing smile and said, audaciously, "Glad you found me now?"

He caught her so close then that she missed a step. She wondered breathlessly if Emily had seen.

"Going to met me some afternoon?"

"Am I!"

"I'll be waiting. Like to drive? How about dinner somewhere?"

She remembered Dottie suddenly and wondered if they had made her talk yet. Something unpleasant would be sure to happen when Dottie began to talk.

But the dance ended and she felt his lips brush her hair before he let her go.

CHAPTER XXXI.

EVERY morning when Emily went to the shop there would be a box with her name on it hanging to the door knob.

She would remove it, flushing a little, and wait until she had taken off her hat and tidied up the rooms before opening it. It seemed almost that she wished to delay this moment.

Yet when she had untied the cord the tissue wrappings would give up a bouquet, fresh and lovely, always packed in fern. Sometimes there would be a whimsical and affectionate little note, but never a card. Still that wasn't necessary. Kingdon Coles sent her the flowers. Each morning that had gone since that ride up the Storm King Road he had done this.

A bunch of violets, a flutter of sweet-peas, pale pink and lovely like herself; perhaps two or three golden orchids, sophisticated and fragile.

Very beautiful they were, very colorful. Yet never fragrant.

"Hot house flowers" she would tell herself. "Blossoms forced into being—well, they'd have no perfume. Smell of the sun and the clean wind—not for them. Gorgeous but not sweet. They fill the eye, never the heart."

And it would seem to her that someway they symbolized her relationship to Coles.

She tried very hard to love him. She had given her word, or almost had given it, that she would be his wife one day. And she felt a tenderness was due him, something of the shining lilt Kent had stirred in her.

DO YOU KNOW YOUR "TRAFFIC COP?"

HE SHOULD BE A FRIEND OF YOURS

Wouldn't you like to drive to the office in the morning and speak thusly to your favorite "traffic cop" when he beams upon you—as though nothing ever happened to make him angry!—passing: "Good morning, Officer Rafferty"—or else, yell "Hi, Teddy!" Well, The Sun Tele's series, "Traffic Cops," will tell you how. This fellow today may be found downtown, but don't spend the day hunting for him when The Sun-Tele will tell you his name tomorrow.

Yesterday's 'traffic cop' was Leo McCann, 5120 Landora street, Hazelwood, the "early trick" gentleman who "works" Sixth avenue and Wood street. He has been a cornerman for three and a half yyears of his seven and one-half years in the service.

PRAYER FOR VOTES—ROGERS

By WILL ROGERS.

HOUSTON, Tex., June 27.—The show was called to order at twelve-twenty, Jefferson time. It took Clem Shaver 20 minutes of steady hammering to get order enough for them to listen to a prayer. They didn't want to listen to a prayer, it was an argument that they wanted to listen to.

That's where he made his mistake. If I was chairman of a Democratic convention, when I wanted it quiet, I would announce:

"Just one moment hyenas, if you will be quiet we will start a debate and it has the possibilities of ending in a fight."

That would shut 'em up in a minute.

The meeting didn't hold long. It was the shortest Democratic gathering on record. Some man prayed. I didn't get his name, or political faith. But from his earnestness, I should say he was a Democrat. He not only asked for guidance, but he wisely insinuated for votes.

NO MEMORY PRAYER

He read his prayer ending with the Lord's Prayer. He read that, too. The reason he read that, he may have had a different version of it for this occasion.

I am going to keep going to these conventions till I find a preacher that can pray from memory, and practice. These that I have seen all act like it was their maiden prayers.

Well, after he had finished asking for guidance and material support in November, why a lady sang, and how!

Say, she was good. The only thing that stopped her was a man made a motion to adjourn. She had on an awful pretty big picture hat. I imagine from the way she was dressed that she kinder figured that she might be called on.

She opened up with The Star Spangled Banner. She had a dandy voice, and she knew the song—she didn't read it. People applauded her for knowing the words, and before you knew it she just started right in singing another one, ad lib, too. It was America. She did that because a lot of people don't know which is our National Air, America or The Star Spangled Banner.

So being a good Democrat she just took no chances on the party losing through not singing the right song, so she sang 'em both, and good, too. Well, when the audience realized that she knew all these old folk songs, they applauded and by golly she knocked 'em off "Dixie."

Well, Dixie in Texas is just as sure fire as a flask.

H. L. Mencken, the undesirable element of literature, was sitting by me and he suggested she follow it with "Marching Through Georgia." I knocked him under the press table before Captain Hickman, my Texas Ranger friend, could get out his gun to totally dispose of him.

So it's as I say, we didn't have a thing at this convention but singing and praying. It was more like a revival than a convention.

IT'S A GOOD HALL

There was no speeches and a good time was had by all. It's a wonderful hall, and everybody hopes it was not built in vain.

It seats enough people to elect Jim Ferguson for president if they all voted alike.

But the big event was last night. You know I have been telling you all the time about this fellow Claude Bowers, ever since last spring, when he made a bunch of hungry Democrats quit eating and applaud at the Jackson Day dinner. He is kinder one of my proteges. Well, brother, I don't have to tell you. You had a radio. You must have heard it. If you didn't you missed the treat of a lifetime.

I thought Jim Reed could denounce. Why Jim's denouncing would be taken as compliments after this baby got through.

And Hamilton! What sucker he made out of Hamilton. Why, if I was Andy Mellon I wouldn't even want to be known as the best treasurer since Alexander Hamilton.

ANDY GETS DIG

And say, didn't he give Andy a dig, too? Why, he had no respect for men in high places at all. Why, one time some speaker was accused of showing disrespect for our government by just imitating some of them, while here this little fellow gets up there, and what he calls 'em! And he wasn't joking about 'em', like I was. He was on the level.

It wasn't a keynote speech, it was a "lock and key" speech. And after he had finished, why the whole Republican Party should hev' been put under lock and key.

It must be true, or they would sue him. Course, him just being an editorial writer, he hasn't got anything, but Barney Baruch, and Jesse Jones, and Kenny, and Norman Mack, and them, they have got a little left over from the Democratic administration, and they put this fellow up to saying it.

Why, if I was a Republican I would be ashamed to go to the polls and collect my votes after that.

3 COUPLES NEAR 400 HOURS

Charged with cruelty in permitting a 15-year-old girl to enter the contest, two promoters of the Negro marathon dance, now nearing its 400th hour in Motor Square Garden, were fined $25 and costs each by Justice of the Peace Ira H. Edmundson, of Mt. Lebanon.

Alexander Ardoline and John Farina, were held guilty of the charge which had been preferred by the Western Pennsylvania Humane Society in a decision rendered late yesterday, following a hearing last week.

Testimony disclosed that the dance managers had permitted Henrietta Cooper, a few months past 15, to enter the contest on her plea that she was 18, without investigating her age. She dropped out of the grind after two days.

Parents of the girl, Mr. and Mrs John Cooper, charged with cruelty and neglect, by the Humane Society, were discharged by Edmunson. They testified the girl had entered the shuffle against their wishes.

Three Negro couples were rapidly closing in on 400 hours of insomnia dancing at Motor Square Garden today. They had shuffled along to a local record of 397 hours at 2 o'clock this afternoon, each couple showing a determination to wear out the other contestants. A break in the ranks had been expected, but the wavering couples held on.

To enliven the proceedings, Clara and Rufus McCraw, of Winslow street, who on Tuesday celebrated their fourth wedding anniversary, put on an exhibition of fancy stepping early today and drew in extra cash for their efforts. Their sprightliness surprised the audience.

In Duquesne Garden nine couples started their 330th hour at 2 o'clock this afternoon, one team having dropped out of the contest. Rose Ebert, of 328 Merrimac street, and Whitney Baldwin, 457 Carnegie avenue, Mt. Lebanon, quit on the 5:15 rest period. They had danced 326 hours. Picking up was the report from the box office. The after-theater crowd swelled the attendance to its highest peak last night, the management reported.

As the two Pittsburgh marathons piled up hours, another contest was started in Stahl's Gardens, Homestead, the second in the steel town. Twenty-two couples teed off in the intercity contest in the up-river borough at 8 o'clock last night. John Mansel and Sally Bennett, who had participated in the marathon in the same hall last month, were among the contestants. Charles Weber and Alice Stransky quit at 9 o'clock today. Amelia Fletcher furnished feature dances during the evening.

GREENSBURG, Pa., June 27.—The last 24 hours of dancing made no change in the program at the local dance derby. Seven couples and two unattached males continued to wander around the floor, running their string of hours to 229 at 2 o'clock this afternoon.

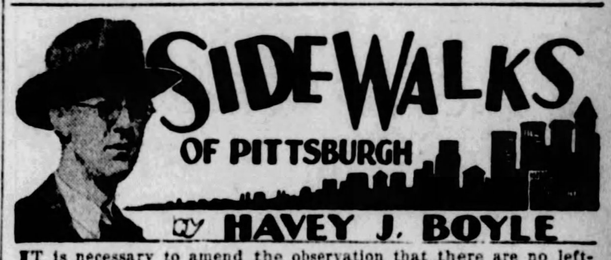
Tonight Gertie Miller, Pittsburgh, and Jorn Gross, New Kensington, will be married on the dance floor, the management announced.

CHARLEROI, Pa., June 27.—Ten couples remain in the Charleroi Firemen's dance today, with a mark of 56 hours.

DONORA, Pa., June 27.—Fourteen couples remained in the local marathon on the third day. Matthew Borzella, Monogahela City, developed a toothache last night and Dr. M. F. Rumbaugh was summoned and extracted the offending tooth as Borzella continued dancing.

Howard Hillman could not be awakened early today after a rest period, so his partner, Maria Smith, carried him onto the floor and danced with him until he awoke.

Tiring of the usual dance stuff, the contestants staged a square dance for half an hour starting at 3 o'clock this morning.



IT is necessary to amend the observation that there are no left-handed barbers. There are, and besides, there are two or three correspondents ready to submit proof. A physician who lives in Etna, reports that Pete Norman, of that borough, is a southpaw razor manipulator. And the doctor cannot resist the impulse to pull a nifty while writing of barbers. He says many an Etna high scool girl gets a bob in Pete's shop over the weak end.

"Last Saturday," writes another contributor to the left-handed barber symposium, "while getting a haircut and a shave, I saw such a barber as you seem anxious to locate. I don't know his name and I don't have the time to inquire until next Saturday. Besides, I paid little attention, save to note he held the shears in his left hand, the comb in his right. If it is necessary I can find out more about him and make certain he is a southpaw. He is young, although he works like a veteran. You can find out more about him if you write to his boss, Philip Bruno, Jefferson avenue, Canonsburg." The report is signed by Eddie M. Jasper, whose mail reaches him at Box No. 1, Canonsburg, Pa.

THESE two letters are convincing enough, but here is a clincher, which settles the problem for all time, for this correspondent is himself a barber and a left-handed one. This is not the only surprise, for the letter reveals that by a quaint coincidence, this left-handed barber has a brother, who also barbers, and while we know this will tax your credulity, you must set yourself for the shock and hold onto your chair, is also a southpaw. M. M. Heitchue is the name of the correspondent, and his brother's name is Harry.

After all this we feel like saying, as the heroine in a play often says: "Life is like that.....isn't it?" After all, there are left-handed barbers.

AT Case, in Cleveland, the undergraduates gave him many a locomotive, for when a yard was needed for first down he hitched at his belt, took the ball and climbed through. On the baseball diamond at the same school it often was his bat that clicked the ball over the fence for the home run in the ninth to score four runs with two down, and win the game for Case. Score: 4 to 3. After school he went into industry and helped the community by his work in civic affairs. He recently came to Pittsburgh to become associated with the Oliver Iron and Steel Company. His name is Bert Quarrie. The scenario is furnished by R. M. Rush, another Clevelander, who came to Pittsburgh to stay.

An error in the mail delivery brings the following note to this desk from a nearby city: "I am a clerk in a bakery shop. There is a certain person working here whom I am very fond of. He speaks to me but little. How can I win his confidence?"

We wouldn't know much about that one. However, there are ways and means. One of the most impressive ways would be to invite him to your home for a meal. The next step is to don a pretty white apron and appear very homey in preparing the meal. Just about the time you place a large steak and a dish of mashed potatoes in front of him, it might be well to say that you are tired of running around and often figure you would like to settle down. If he starts to slip, it might be well to add further that your silly old sister swears you are the best cook in the family, which, of course, you deny. When you thus have him hanging on the ropes, take a windup and deliver this one "You know, Oscar, you somehow seem different from any fellow I ever knew."

This is only one out of 4,485,678 ways to land your man.

TWO STOLEN IDOLS

MYSTERY! THRILLS! ADVENTURE! LOVE!!!

by FRANK L. PACKARD

At Java Dick's, Bob Finds Out Many Things of Unusual Interest

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

The body of Tom Kingsley is picked up by Capt. "Scarface" Sweeney and his mate, Marlow, off Singapore. Tom's brother, Robert, also an old "sea dog," is notified of the death and receives articles found on the corpse. Among these are two small but handsomely carved Ivory Idols. Robert Kingsley has good reason to believe that Hsi Yan, an ancient enemy, has returned after 30 years to seek vengeance. The Idols are stolen and Young Bob starts out to recover them. After many adventures Bob and Verna Lyle are both prisoners at Richardson's plantation. The Malay whom Bob had rescued plans Verna's and Bob's escape. Bob, still bound, is carried to safety by the Malay. Bob plans to leave Verna with friends in Kalawa. Bob finds one Idol and discovers it holds a message in cypher. He starts for Singapore determined to solve the mystery. He visits Java Dick and meets old friends.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

BOB KINGSLEY stumbled forward on the young Chinaman's arm. The room, he knew, was but one of several that flanked each side of Tao Lin's "reception" room, and, devoted to Java Dick's various and nefarious enterprises, of which an extensive opium den was not the least, occupied the rear of the three or four buildings that were protected by the barrage of business signs on the public thoroughfare.

Nor was the room itself new to him. The only change he noted was the installation of a somewhat cheap and woebegone roulette outfit. The furnishings were sparse and crude. There were a few native mats on the floor, a few stools—the walls were bare. Likewise the lighting was anything but elaborate. The use of electricity involved dealings with those who were quite outside the pale, who might wonder at the amount of current used and the why of it, and who might even demand the right to inspect or make repairs to their property at inconvenient seasons. Therefore Java Dick used lamps.

But even in the rather dull light afforded by the lamps, an illumination which was in no way enhanced by the smoke-laden atmosphere, Bob Kingsley blinked as his guide conducted him to the lower end of the roulette table and made a place for him by incontinently shoving aside those who were clustered three deep around it. And here he stood with difficulty on his feet. The young Chinaman brought him a stool. Bob Kingsley smiled inanely, pulled his cap down on his forehead, pushed it to the back of his head again, and more or less collapsed on the stool.

Still blinking, he stared around the table. Every native race and every shade of color seemed to be represented: There was a Negrito, there an East Indian, there a Chinaman, there a little coal-black chap that might have been a Solomon Islander—but all of them the scum of their kind; filthy in their dress, what little of it some of them wore; an ugly depravity in the face of every last one of them. Those whose places he had taken scowled at him savagely, but they made no effort to recover their lost vantage point. Not only was he hopelessly drunk, a condition that they understood intimately; but, from the marked attention he had received, he obviously stood high in Java Dick's favor—so they merely crowded in behind him again.

The bets that were being made, though numerous, were paltry, for the assemblage was not one of affluence; and after several futile efforts, during which he preserved his balance on the stool miraculously, Bob Kingsley produced a coin and threw it out on the table. It rolled as drunkenly as its owner, and finally came to rest far up the board. But Bob Kingsley's head was down on his sprawled arms now. He was apparently oblivious to the fact that he had made a small winning, and that several coins besides his own were pushed toward him by a grinning Malay in a flowered blouse who acted as croupier. The coins remained unnoticed and untouched in front of him—but not for long! Presently a hand reached stealthily out from behind and filched them.

At times Bob Kingsley raised his head and stared vacantly around him; but, for the most part, his head lay buried in his arms and hands, and he watched the faces up and down the table through his fingers. He could have fallen on no better luck! Not only were these the choicest types for his purpose, but there were more of them than he had hoped for—therefore the more quickly and the more widely they would spread the tale of the little ivory idol for him. But they must know a little something about it to impress them with its significance. It was simple enough, by means of any one of a dozen drunken, clumsy, and apparently unintentional acts, to let them all see the idol; but the mere sight of it alone would mean nothing to them. That was where Java Dick would come in. A man, prompted by drink—Bob Kingsley's lips twitched quizzically behind his hands—talked overloudly sometimes even when disclosing in strictest confidence what was intended for the ears of a single intimate alone! Therefore he must wait for Java Dick. But he was in no hurry. The night was young yet—not more than 10 o'clock.

His head went lower on his arms to hide another smile—not so quizzical this time. If Verna could see him here like this! Black Bob—in one of the worst stink-pots of Asia! Oh, well—he barely suppressed a shrug of his shoulders—what difference would it make! One couldn't go beyond the dregs, and he was already there in her estimation. Anyway, she was safe now in Kalawa with the Crowleys for the time being at least; and she would be safe for all time if he succeeded tonight in focusing the attention of Chen-shu's crowd upon himself alone. It was the idol they wanted—and they would know before he was through that he had it. Not Verna! She was to fade out of the picture. He had told her that.

His fingers dug at his jowls and left red marks. Yes, and fade out of his life, too! He wondered if he would ever see her again. Not much chance! His fingers dug deeper. The main thing tonight was her safety—that, and the hope that the trap he baited would bring about the fulfillment of his promise to the helpless old man who dragged himself around in that wheel-chair out there in Patua—the promise that justice should fall upon the heads of the murderous swine who had done another of the Kingsley name to death at Kalawa.

Kalawa! His mind went back to Kalawa. Verna was there. A bit unexpected, that attitude of hers toward the Crowleys! She had not shown any antipathy toward them when she had met them on the beach; on the contrary, she seemed to have put herself in their hands almost willingly. Perhaps it was that jovial face of Crowley, or the motherly smile of the wife! Anyway, it had been—

Bob Kingsley's mental soliloquy came to a sudden and definite termination. He felt his pulse quicken, felt the blood pounding at his temples. A newcomer had joined the group around the table. The man hadn't come from the direction of Tao Lin's specious antechamber, but from one of the other gambling rooms. Bob Kingsley stared through his laced fingers. No, he wasn't the sport of his own imagination! The man was Won Fu.

Lillian Seems Disturbed Over Her Discovery

LILLIAN started perceptibly at my question concerning Dicky and the red-bearded man. It is not like her to betray even the slightest confusion at anything—I have seen her present a most successful poker face to many opponents and in divers crises—and I wondered vaguely at the troubled uncertainty which had invested her discussion of our bizarre neighbor of the shack north of the farmstead. The next second, however, she was herself again, and there was no tiniest crack in her armor of poise.

"Oh! yes, you did tell me that Dicky appeared to know the man and share some sort of joke with him," she said with the air of remembering something inconsequent. "But that's nothing to lose any sleep over. You can be very sure that the Dicky-bird isn't mixed up, even remotely, with anything revolutionary—he's too much of a conservative."

"You know I didn't think anything of the sort," I said hotly, then at her low laugh realized that I had been drawn.

"Hook, line and sinker," she said triumphantly. "However, that doesn't alter the fact that I'm going to have a tiny pow-wow with your husband the very first opportunity I have after his arrival this evening, and get the low down on this red-bearded chap. Dicky always did have the most nondescript collection of derelict acquaintances in the world, even in his earlier days, and his war sojourn overseas didn't decrease the collection any. And you know the Dicky-bird. All he asks of a man is that he be able to furnish a laugh. But I may be able to get a line on the chap from your gifted husband, so please mike me when he gets here. I'll be tuned in and listening."

"You shall be miked," I assured her, and then she rose, elaborately concealing a yawn—altogether too exaggeratedly, I thought with suddenly narrowed observant eyes.

"I didn't sleep well last night," she said, "and I sure am paying for it now. I'm too sleepy to breathe. If you have nothing on for me, I believe I'll go upstairs and have a nap."

"There's absolutely nothing for you to do," I told her, and she went past me hurriedly, her face turned away from me. For an instant I wondered if she purposely had averted her face, wondered also if my impression of something tense and strained in her manner was a figment of my overstrained imagination. There had been nothing to upset her save perhaps her theory that she somewhere had seen the red-bearded man, but she had had far too much experience with men of his ilk to make the recognition of one of them disturbing to her.

At any rate I told myself there was nothing more absurd than for me to worry over something which in all probability was not even keeping Lillian awake. I had two problems of my own to face, the minor one of deciding what punishment I should give Junior for running away, and the major one of the conflict with Dicky over my tutoring of Eleanor Lincoln. This had been foreshadowed by his explosion over the telephone when he learned that my work for Philip Veritzen had been expanded to include the giving of lessons in the history of the drama, and I knew that I could put off the rest of the controversy no longer than his arrival in the evening.

The problem of Junior did not give me much thought. He had not meant to disobey, and my only reason for giving him any punishment at all was to make him realize the necessity of his staying within the bounds set for him. So it was in a very lenient mood that I climbed the stairs to my small son's room.

GRIMES IS HERO OF TWIN BILL

BEST IN PITTSBURGH — WEDNESDAY, JUNE 27, 1928 — TWENTY

BELGIAN HEAVY BEATS DORVAL

NEW YORK, June 27.—(AP.) — Pierre Charles, Belgian heavyweight, outpointed Jack Dorval, of Pennsylvania, in the 10-round feature bout at the Queensboro Stadium last night. The Belgian giant outboxed his rival from start to finish. Charles weighed 201½; Dorval 206.

SPORT COMMENT by JAMES J. LONG

Grimes Acting Part of Whole Pirate Slab Staff—Only One Run Scored on Him in His Last Three Games—Vance Did Not Always Possess His Present Great Control.

TOO bad Burleigh Grimes isn't twins. It would be even better if he were triplets. As matters stand, he has got to act the part of a whole pitching staff for the Pittsburgh club, and that's altogether too much for a single hurler, even such a husky one as the veteran spitballer who is having one of the best years of his career in baseball.

Burleigh Grimes

It required shutout pitching by Grimes to save the Pirates from being beaten twice in yesterday's doubleheader at Chicago. That would have meant the loss of the entire series of three games in Cubland, and the Bucs might not have had a very high morale going into the important string of five battles with the league-leading Cardinals in St. Louis, starting tomorrow.

IN beating Sheriff Blake and Cubs in the first game of the double-header yesterday, Grimes added one more to his season's string of feature performances. He had to pitch shutout ball to win for the Bucs, and even when only one tally was necessary for victory his teammates could not produce for him, and he was required to bat in the run himself. He came within one of having as many hits as he allowed the entire Chicago team.

GRIMES' record of late has been remarkable. He has won six of his last seven games, and not only has he won his last three without a break but in the entire three games, or 27 innings, only one run has been scored on him. He beat New York on June 17, 6 to 0, trimmed Cincinnati June 22, by the lopsided score of 11 to 1, and knocked off the Cubs yesterday, 1 to 0. In addition to giving the enemy only one run in the last 27 innings, Burleigh has also yielded a total of only 16 hits in the three games, holding the Giants, Reds and Cubs to a grand batting average of only .185, in a total of 92 times at bat.

THE Minera (O.) citizen has been scored on in only three of the last 41 innings he has pitched. Perhaps some other chucker in the big show has been doing equally well during the same period, but if so, the fact has escaped general notice.

Dazzy Vance

It's tough break for the Pirates that Burleigh isn't getting any assistance worthy of the name from Hill, Kremer, Miljus and Meadows.

WONDER has been expressed at the temerity with which batters face the terrific delivery of Dazzy Vance. The explanation is the same as in the heyday of Walter Johnson as a speedball specialist. The pitcher is known to have control, and the batter is confident of not being hit with the ball.

But there were days when Dazzy didn't have such perfect command of the ball. It was because he was wild that both Pittsburgh and the New York Americans dropped him in 1916 and sent him back to the minors for a stay of eight years.

VANCE himself tells of the days when he didn't have control. "I was at my worst in 1914," he confided to a Brooklyn critic. "Before the first of August I hit no fewer than 25 batters in the Western League, but I believe that not more than 10 of them were hit on the head with what I laughingly called my fast ball. Only one was skulled seriously. They poured water on him for four hours and he finally came through. The Yankees in those days were not what they are now. They were always in the cellar or thereabouts. Maybe they thought that the only way to get up there was to send a few of the stars of other teams to the hospital, so they bought me. I certainly wasn't ready to pitch in the majors at that time."

IF the twice-postponed meeting of George Godfrey and Johnny Risko, slated for tonight in Brooklyn, doesn't get rid of its jinx and succeed in having itself staged before Friday, Promoter Humbert J. Fugazy will find himself in another peck of trouble.

Humbert J. Fugazy

For Friday is the day on which the Federal war tax on amusement tickets up to $3 will be abolished, and the new tax of 25 per cent will be placed upon all tickets costing $5 or more.

Think of the nice time Humbert will have refunding the tax on the lower priced tickets already sold, and calling in and exchanging the tickets already sold for $5 or more.

PAUL WYATT, of Uniontown, will be one of only two swimmers who represented the United States in the Olympic games of 1924 to compete in the big meet at Amsterdam this year. Johnny Weismuller is the other.

Eight of the 1924 veterans are to make the trip again, but

SPEAKING OF SPORTS by HARRY KECK SUN-TELEGRAPH SPORTS EDITOR

WHAT Pittsburgh needs is a boxing bowl built along the lines of New Castle's compact little wooden circle named the Jolly Bowl after its sponsor, Billy Jolley. The "e" is left out of the name of the bowl with the idea in mind of telling the people they're in for a jolly good time when they visit the spot.

They had all of that at the inaugural show of the bowl, Tuesday night, when five bouts were staged, with Battling Levinsky and Emmett Rocco, heavyweights, meeting in the main event. The arena is so laid out that the farthest seat at $1 is only about one-half stone's throw from the ring. If it has any fault at all it is that the cheapest seats are as good as the best—and that's hardly a fault.

WITH Forbes Field unavailable for boxing and no other site in view, it would appear that a live promoter here well might imitate the happy-go-lucky Jolly, who leased a spot not more than five minutes' drive from the heart of town in New Castle and put up the wooden structure capable of holding approximately 5,000 persons at an outlay of about $7,000. Lively cards at popular prices would jam such an arena in Pittsburgh each week during the warmer months and the structure soon would be paid for and begin showing a profit. Until such an arena is erected, boxing will continue at a standstill during the summer season in this city.

That the fans want outdoor boxing was testified when Jolly drew a capacity crowd to his arena for his opening show. They came from as far away as Pittsburgh, Erie, Meadville, Oil City and Youngstown and Cleveland. And all were loud in their praise of the seating arrangements and the manner in which the crowd was handled and the bouts were staged.

ALWAYS in the fight game there must be a good man in the cor-

ENTRIES MOUNT

The 300 mark is next in the goal of entries for the Sun-Telegraph's popular free golf tournament for juniors and sub-juniors, to be held over the Schenley Park public links on Thursday, July 12. Herewith are presented the pictures of some of the recent entrants.

JUST KIDS

Youngsters of all sizes and ages up to 18 years will compete for the prizes in the Sun-Tele tournament.

CHAMP HERE?

Is the lad who will be crowned champion of the Sun-Tele's West Penn tournament included in this gallery of young hopefuls? The competition will be at 18 holes medal play from scratch for juniors and sub-juniors, and low score, whether made by a junior or sub-junior (up to 14 years old), will determine the champion.

EXPERTS

There are some nifty juvenile players among the entries for the Sun-Tele tournament for the William Randolph Hearst trophy and sundry other prizes—and, then, of course, there are duffers, too. A number of the entrants communicate the information that they are caddies and quite proficient in the art of batting that little white pellet over the links.

REFEREE HALTS BOUT ON COAST

LOS ANGELES, June 27.—(AP.(—Jackie Fields, of Los Angeles, won his first bout in the welterweight ranks here last night by a technical knockout scored over Jack Zivic, of Pittsburgh.

The referee stopped the scheduled 10-round bout in the seventh round when Zivic was hanging on the ropes helpless.

FIRST REAL KAYO

The technical knockout defeat of Jack Zivic, rugged local welterweight, by Jackie Fields at Los Angeles last night, marked the first time in the career of the former championship contender that he has been unable to finish a bout because of the punishment meted out by his opponent. Two other technical knockouts are entered in the records against him, but both were due to the snapping out of place of a trick shoulder in bouts early in his career in New York. He subsequently underwent an operation for the correction of this defect and it proved successful.

Zivic, who started out as an amateur star, and, with his brother Pete, boxed in the Olympic games in 1920, was a star boxer when he first gained fame, but, following the scoring of sensational knockout victories over Lew Tendler and Nate Goldman in bouts at Motor Square Garden, he developed into a left-hooking slugger who fought in give-and-take fashion. He absorbed considerable punishment in many of his bouts, but it remained for Fields to be the first opponent to pepper him so badly that the referee had to intervene.

FIGHT RESULTS

At Los Angeles—Jackie Fields won by technical knockout over Jack Zivic, 7 rounds.

At New York—Pierre Charles defeated Jack Dorval, 10 rounds.

At Boston—Al Mello defeated Billy Murphy, 10 rounds; Charley Donovan defeated Pete Pacheco, 8 rounds.

PIRATE CUBS AT HOME

Tomorrow at 6:30 the Pirate Cubs will play the Mt. Oliver A. C. at Arlington Playgrounds. The Cubs would like to hear from leading light first-class teams. Call Lafayette 2111-J.

Saylor, Scello Set

THE boxing fans have responded nicely to the offering of Jules Beck for his first show of the outdoor season, to be held at the Duquesne Steel Park, Duquesne, tomorrow night, and if the weather is good the promoter is confident he will get a paying crowd. His advance sale of tickets has been good and the fans are talking up the show.

Phil Scello and Young Saylor, welterweight rivals who meet in the 10-round main bout, wound up their training yesterday and will merely go through light limbering-up exercises today.

Jack Katkish of Lawrenceville meets Johnny Carey of Erie in the six-round semi-final and there will be two other six-round bouts.

The first show of the summer season in the Temple of Music at Conneaut Lake Park will be held this evening, with Maxie Strub of Erie meeting Mike Ballerino of Bayonne, N. J., former junior lightweight champion, in the 10-round main bout.

Johnny Risko's chances of defeating George Godfrey in their bout at Ebbets Field, Brooklyn, are regarded as even better than they were before the two postponements last week.

Answer to query—Jack Sharkey boxed George Godfrey September 21, 1926, and Harry Wills October 12, 1926.

Andy Tomosky, Wilmerding bantamweight, is now under the management of Billy Thompson of Atlantic City, and is sojourning for the summer at the New Jersey resort.

Tony Canzoneri, featherweight champion, and Harry Blitman clash over the 10-round route in a non-title bout at the Phillies' baseball park, Philadelphia, tonight. Other bouts on the card include Rosy Stoy vs. Eddie Shea, Johnny Erickson vs. Pinky May and Mickey Martell vs. Pat Haley, all 10-rounders.

Sun-Tele Tourney Grows

By VERNON A. SWARTSFAGER.

GOING up! Boys, this is sure going to be one big tournament. The 250 mark has been passed! And before we know it, i fthe entries continue to keep piling in the way they have the last couple of days, the Sun-Telegraph's first annual West Penn amateur golf tournament on July 12 at Schenley Park for the William Randolph Hearst trophy and individual prizes in two divisions, will reach more than 400. Which means that when the entry list closes Monday, July 9, any boy who has not been prompt in sending in his entry will be missing a big treat.

There are two divisions for you to enter, either the Junior Class, for boys between the ages of 15 and 18, or the Sub-Junior, for youthful golfers 14 years of age and under. The only restrictions placed upon you are that you are strictly an amateur as defined by the United States Golf Association, and that you are 18 and under and not attending an institution of education above high school grades. Now that doesn't mean boys attending prep and private schools can't enter by any means—there are a lot of boys in prep and private schools who are not graded above the high school classification. Caddies who have accepted money for caddying after their sixteenth birthday are not eligible.

There are 50 communities—towns, boroughs, townships—represented in the Sun-Tele's tournament. There is no restriction placed upon your residence—you can live

DECATUR OPPOSES BUCCOS TODAY

By CHARLES J. DOYLE, Sun-Telegraph Staff Correspondent.

DECATUR, Ill., June 27.—The Pirates had a stop-over privilege today as they visited this Illinois town for the purpose of meeting the local club of the Three-I League. The date is open on the Pittsburgh championship card. En route to St. Louis from Chicago, the Freebooters reached Decatur early this morning. At the conclusion of the clash with the Class B leaguers, the Big Timers will resume their journey to St. Louis, where tomorrow they will begin a five-game series with Bill McKechnie's high-flying Redbirds. The Buccos are due in St. Louis tonight. Two contests are on the card for Sunday.

LOTS OF EXCITEMENT

The twin bill with the Cubs yesterday proved one of those stand-off arguments after 18 rounds of excitement. Burleigh Grimes, ace of the Pittsburgh slab staff, rose to dizzy heights again as he triumphed over the Bears, 1 to 0, in a masterpiece. Sheriff Fred Blake contested Grimes through a part of this contest, Altoona Pat Malone finishing up for the Cubs.

In the first inning of the closing fight the Pirates gave promise of making it a perfect day. The Bushwackers hammered Percy Lee Jones off the hill in the opening session, but John Miljus could not hold the enemy. Later in the fray, Paul Waner failed to get a liner off Gonzales' bat that went for a lucky double and provided a rare opportunity for the Bears to break a tie. They did. The score of this encounter was 7 to 3.

Georgia Youth In Boston for Philly Race

BOSTON, June 27.—(AP.)—A few hundred miles mean nothing to Blandford Eubanks, Olympic track candidate from Rome, Ga.

He dropped in at the Boston Athletic Association to inquire about training places. He told Tom Kanaly, athletic manager, that he came here to run the 400-meter hurdles.

"Why," Kanaly exploded, "the 400-meter hurdles will be run at Philadelphia."

"That so?" asked Eubanks, "well then, I'd better be getting on to Philadelphia. Good thing I came up early. I'd have been out of luck if I had made a late start."

ner if a boxer is to have an even chance for success. The same applies to a promoter who wants to go over. Such a good man in the corner has Promoter Jolly. His right hand man in putting over the mammoth inaugural of the bowl was Ed Fritz, veteran sports scribe, manager of boxers and referee, of New Castle. Fritz handled the promotion of the show, the tickets and seating arrangements, the police and fire protection and sundry other details, taking these burdens off Jolly's mind. He also made up part of the card and likely will have charge of all of the matchmaking in the future, and to him must go the lion's share of the credit for the success of the venture. Jolly doesn't begrudge if to him, either. He realizes the value of having an experienced head in his corner.

Immediately after Tuesday night's show he authorized Fritz to get to work on his next two shows, in one of which Rocco, as the result of his victory over Levinsky, will meet a worthy heavyweight from the East. If Fritz is able to land either of two men he has in mind, he will startle the fans by the calibre of the match.

AMERICAN DAVIS CUP PLAYERS ADVANCE

WIMBLEDON, England, June 27.—(AP.)—Led by Miss Helen Wills, the California girl who is defending the women's singles championship, the American players emerged triumphant in four out of five matches today in the Wimbledon tournament.

The veteran former American champion, Mrs. Molla Mallory, was the only one of the five to meet defeat. She bowed to the youth and speed of Miss L. Bickerton, 6-3, 4-6, 6-4, in a match that was interrupted yesterday after the first set by rain.

Miss Wills, displaying even more of the dash, power and consummate skill expected of her, triumphed easily over Miss Elsie A. Goldsack, of England, 6-2, 6-1, in her first singles test on the center court.

MISS ANDERSON WINS

The other American victories were scored by Miss Penelope Anderson, Richmond, Va., girl, who defeated Miss Christabel Hardie, of England, 6-4, 6-4, and by the two young Davis Cup team members, Wilbur (Junior) Coen, of Kansas City, and John Hennessey, of Indianapolis. Coen disposed of the Indian Davis Cup player, E. V. Bobb, 6-3, 6-3, 6-3, while Smiling John Hennessey eliminated Norman Latchford, of England, 6-2, 6-4, 6-2.

Miss E. Boyd, the Australian player, sprang an upset by eliminating Miss Gwynneth Sterry, English star, in a keenly contested match, 6-3, 10-8. Miss Sterry, the only player to take a set from Miss Wills in last year's tournament, or anywhere else, played with the Wightman Cup Team in the United States and was one of the British favorites.

HELEN IMPRESSIVE

A gallery of 15,000 spectators that crowded the big stadium was impressed by the power and decisiveness of Miss Wills' play, especially as her opponent, Miss Goldsack had recently won the English Hardcourt championship at Bournemouth and been regarded as one of the most improved players in the country.

Miss Goldsack did not appear in the least nervous. She put up as good a game as she has shown this season, in the opinion of critics, but had neither the stroking power nor tactics to match those of the California girl. Spectators left the stands convinced that reports of Miss Wills being even better than last year were not exaggerated.

Miss Amelia Earhart, the trans-Atlantic flyer, left the stands after the Wills match.

Miss Cecilie Aussem, German champion and one of Miss Wills' leading rivals, scored almost as easily, defeating Miss M. V. Chamberlain of England, 6-2, 6-4.

HELEN JACOBS WINS

Miss Helen Jacobs, California team-mate of Helen Wills, trounced Joan Ridley, English star, with the loss of only two games, 6-0, 6-2.

Elizabeth Ryan, Californian now residing in England, easily defeated Mrs. A. V. Bridge of England, 6-1, 6-4.

An All-American singles match resulted in a victory for Sidney Wood, former United States Boys' champion, over his Forest Hills, (N. Y.) clubmate, Harry C. Brunie, 1-6, 4-6, 6-3, 6-4, 6-2.

TENNIS CHAMPS CROWNED

By PAUL G. SULLIVAN.

The field of activity in the annual Western Pennsylvania tennis championships was limited to men's doubles competition today as a result of the crowning of men's and women's singles champions yesterday afternoon.

Although the tournament has been in progress for many days, rain has delayed play so frequently that the doubles competition still is in its infancy and a crowded program was offered on the courts of the Pittsburgh Golf Club beginning at 2 o'clock this afternoon.

Both men's and women's singles finals were filled with action and high-class tennis. John O'Loughlin performed in a manner befitting a champion in defeating brother Billy for the crown, 6-1, 6-2, 4-6, 6-3, and Mrs. Dorothy Lewis, of Alliance, O., outsteadied Elizabeth Labarthe, hard-hitting Californian, 6-0, 6-2, to ascent to the women's throne.

Overdrives Pin, Backspin Gets Doctor Ace

Dr. Harry C. Metz scored one of the most unusual holes-in-one of this or any other season at the St. Clair Country Club yesterday when his ball jumped back into the cup at the short No. 2 hole.

Using a mashie niblick, Dr. Metz loaded the ball down with backspin, dropped it on the green a couple of feet beyond the hole and then watched it jump back into the cup when the backspin "took."

Dr. Metz scored his ace in the tournament for Kiwanians of Greensburg, New Kensington and Coraopolise, and made it a perfect day by annexing the low gross prize. Clay Manville won low net honors.

Godfrey, Risko Ready

NEW YORK, June 27.—(AP.)—Another effort will be made tonight to clear the heavyweight tussle of Johnny Risko, rotund Cleveland heavyweight, and George Godfrey, Negro giant, from the crowded fistic decks at Ebbets Field.

The match, first scheduled for last Wednesday night, was postponed twice last week. Rain halted the fray for the second time on Saturday. The postponements forced a junior lightweight title match between Tod Morgan, of Seattle, and Cannonball Eddie Martin, former bantamweight champion, over until July 4, and caused a temporary abandonment of a bout between Mickey Walker and Leo Lomski, scheduled for the holiday date.

Despite the delays, Risko and Godfrey have continued rigorous training. They will weigh in today before the New York State Athletic Commission at 2 p. m. Both are in fine fettle for the fray.

second game. The strong sharpshooter from the Main-line town was a veritable Vance as he made the Pittsburgh hitters look like easy picking in the last three frames. Pat did not receive credit for the victory, Guy Bush being an official participant in the contest when the winning tallies went over.

But to get back to Minerva Burleigh and his eleventh victory of the current campaign. Grimes had to dish out nine "horse-collars" to win and that is exactly what he did as he held the Cubs to four hits, one which would have been a put-out had Dick Bartell thrown the ball up to Grantham.

RUTH HITS HOME RUN; YANKS, HARRISBURG TIE

HARRISBURG, Pa., June 27.—(AP.)—Babe Ruth and his slugging teammates of the New York Yankees, were held to a 6-6 tie by the Harrisburg Senator champions of the New York-Pennsylvania League, in an exhibition contest here yesterday. of five of them are members of the water polo team and one is a diver.

There is not a swimmer or diver on the entire squad (the polo team excepted), who is more than 23 years old. Many track and field athletes, boxers, wrestlers and marathoners are beyond the 30-year mark.

AN idea of the immense area that Chicago has devoted to parks and playgrounds and the manner in which it provides for municipal athletics and recreation may be gleaned from the following information sent to H. K. Hambly, of Pittsburgh, by Frederick Rex, librarian of the Municipal Reference Library of Chicago. Total park area 5,912,204 acres, 193 playgrounds, 62 athletic fields, 10 golf courses, 46 swimming pools, 130 miles of boulevards, 13 field hockey courts, 59 gymnasiums, 46 field houses, 580 tennis courts, 15 bathing beaches, 162 baseball and football diamonds and 100 miles of bridlepaths.

ALSO there are facilities for roque, archery, cricket, bowling, soccer, casting and polo. In the Chicago district there are 175 golf courses, 30 of which are public or semi-public.

According to the United States Bureau of Census the total expenditures for public recreation purposes in the city of Chicago in 1925 amounted to $14,827,850. Chicago is planning to start construction this year on what is planned the world's greatest recreation center at the north end of Lincoln Park.

Rickard Admits Deal

By JIMMY CORCORAN.
International News Service.

HOUSTON, Tex., June 27.—Tex Rickard, the celebrated Punch and Judy man, is about to complete a deal for the purchase of the New York Giants. He made this announcement here after lasting through a session of the Democratic convention at the local hippodrome.

"It is true that such a deal is on the fire," Tex said, "and I would not be surprised if the announcement would be made any day. My interests have been dickering with the Stoneham people for some time and are almost ready to close."

Outside of this, Rickard had nothing to say on the subject. He indicated he would relish operating the Giants because he might be able to stage a few of their personal battles in public and cash in on same.

The amount of money involved, stage or otherwise, was not divulged. In fact, the proposed transaction hasn't reached the ballyhoo stage yet, and that probably is one reason for the reticence. When T. Rickard hesitates to talk on a sport subject, my friends, you have seen T. Rickard in a strange mood.

The promoter is here trying to figure out how anyone can be so foolish as to allow 25,000 people to see anything, even the sunset, without paying for it. He is willing to blame it on the heat and let it go at that.

Rickard sat back in the press row with the newspaper boys last night, which is positive proof that he wants to be among friends. Even in Houston, where every delegate is being asked to send home a box of butterscotch to his wife.

KRESS TO COMPETE IN BRIDGEVILLE RACE

One of the big favorites entered in the Independence Day racing program at the famous Bridgeville Speedway, one of the best half-mile board tracks in the country, is Herman Kress, who will drive the Thomas Coffelder entry, the Coffelder Special. Coffelder, a well-known local automobile engineer, has made numerous improvements on his car and feels certain it will lead the field a week from this afternoon.

FANS ATTACK UMPIRE

CUMBERLAND, Md., June 27.—Displeased over some of his decisions, a large gathering of local baseball fans caused a near-riot here yesterday when they made an attempt to attack Umpire McNally, who called the Johnstown-Cumberland game at the end of the sixth inning because of rain with Johnstown leading, 6 to 4. The arbiter was escorted from the field by a cordon of police.

Are Consolidators Laying Up Trouble for Everyone?

—By B. C. FORBES—

ARE our business leaders laying up trouble?

Are industry and business and finance tending in a direction which will yield more satisfaction, more happiness to a larger percentage of the people than ever before?

WE all know that industry and business and finance are tending towards bigger and bigger aggregations of capital, towards bigger and bigger corporations and institutions.

That there is one powerful significant evolution now under way.

We all know, also, that labor-saving machinery is being introduced on a constantly-increasing scale, that it is not uncommon now for one elaborate piece of mechanism to displace 10 or 20 or 50 or even more men.

This evolution ranks next in far-reaching significance and importance.

WHAT effect are these movements destined to have upon the well-being, especially the mental well-being, of the majority of the American people?

TAKE the second development first. This country has witnessed widespread unemployment during a period of what has generally been regarded as better-than-normal prosperity. This is a new phenomenon. Everything has a cause. What has been the cause?

IN the old days it was popular to blame unrestricted immigration, in addition to poor business, for unemployment. We no longer have unrestricted immigration. And business has not been reckoned as poor.

The point is disputed. But the truth, in my opinion, is that the expansion of labor-saving inventions on an unprecedented scale has been a potent factor in bringing about the latest spell of unemployment. This expansion has been accompanied by a notable advance in the science of building and rearranging factories and all kinds of plants so as to yield distinctly greater economy in the use of human labor.

This has given America productive facilities far beyond consumptive demand. Probably in the course of time ways and means will be opened up to make possible the buying, paying for and consuming of far greater quantities of products and thus absorb the workers who have not recently been needed. New inventions, new machines, new cost-cutting and new human desires are calculated to stimulate purchasing and purchasing power—we have seen, for example, how many families have contrived to get possession of an automobile because of their intense desire to acquire so useful and enjoyable a possession.

The employment and unemployment problem has many other angles, but temporarily the growth of labor-saving and other efficiency methods certainly appear to have caused dislocation of employment and unemployment.

IN the long run it can be safely assumed that this evolution will enhance the well-being of the people as a whole, including their mental well-being.

WHAT of the strong trend towards concentration of industry, business and finance into gigantic enterprises?

Will this increase the well-being, including the mental well-being, of the great majority of American families?

Already this revolutionary process has proved painful to many people. Small "independent" manufacturers, wholesalers, retailers, bankers and other classes of business men have found themselves compelled either to go out of business or ally themselves with more powerful organizations. And certain it is that this process will be carried very much further. It is bound to invade even the realm of farming by and by.

"ARE you less happy than you were before?" I asked a manufacturer who was taken over by a nationally-known company.

"Happier—far," he replied emphatically. "I haven't half the worries I used to have and I feel that I'm now taking part in playing a much bigger game."

THIS man happens to have fitted ideally into the bigger concern. But is it going to be possible for our consolidators to compensate the majority of the men they absorb for the loss of their so-called "independence?"

That is the vital problem. Are they going to succeed in solving it satisfactorily? Or are they laying up trouble for themselves and for all of us?

MONEY RATE RISE HALTS STOCKS

NEW YORK, June 27. — (AP.) — Marking up of the call money rate to 7½ per cent, the highest since June 7, 1923, checked a brisk upturn in today's stock market. Early gains of 1 to 4 points in the standard rails and industrials and 5 to 12 points in a few specialties were cut down, but prices generally held above the closing quotations of yesterday. Trading was on a slightly broader scale than yesterday up until the time the high money rate went into effect.

Prices started forward at the opening under the leadership of the copper shares. Fixing of the renewal rate for call money at 7 per cent failed to stem the advance, but when banks called $20,000,000 in loans and the rate was advanced to 7½, bullish enthusiasm began to wane.

Radio, which had advanced 2¾ points to 177½, fell back to around 174⅝. Wright Aeronautical dropped from 140½ to 137½. Greene Cananea Copper from 105¾ to 103 and Curtiss from 99⅝ to 96¼. American Linseed sagged 2 points below yesterday's final quotations, and Delaware & Hudson nearly 5 points. U. S. Rubber common sold at 27, the lowest price in years.

In the early upturn, National Tea had soared 12 points, Adams Express 10, Commercial Solvents 8¾, Montana Power 8, Houston Oil 6½ and Johns Manville and Electric Auto Lite 4 each. Texas & Pacific Railroad common moved into new high ground at 155¾.

COTTON MARKET

NEW YORK, June 27. — The Cotton market opened steady today at an advance of 13 to 21 points on a fairly broadening of the early speculative demand, evidently stimulated by continued reports of unfavorable weather and crop conditions in the South.

Heavy realizing at the higher prices was absorbed at the advance intending to 22.50c for October and 22.04c for March contracts by the end of the first hour, or about 22 to 34 points net higher.

Reports of further rains in the South evidently made a very bullish impression on the market and the readiness with which initial realizing sales were absorbed, increased the confidence of buyers.

Private cables said realizing in Liverpool had been absorbed by trade calling and covering or rebuying on unfavorable weather reports from the South.

The early advance extended to 22.53c for October and the selling became more active after the publication of the weekly weather report. The latter was evidently more favorable than had been expected by some of the recent buyers and the market became unsettled toward noon with October easing off to 22.24c, or within 2 points of yesterday's closing quotation. The volume of business opened off on the reaction with the middle market ruling about 6 to 7 points net higher.

NARROW CHANGES IN QUIET STOCK MARKET HERE

ROUND TABLE of BUSINESS

By GEORGE H. SNYDER.

PITTSBURGH is being deluged with stock market letters from out of town brokers. Many of the firms originating the letters are of doubtful reputation. Advantage is being taken of the increase in public interest in investment and speculation. It is unfortunate that the general knowledge of finance has not grown in proportion to the ownership of securities.

THE usual method of operation is to send daily tips on active stocks in which there is often genuine merit. The prospect is urged to either place buying orders directly with the firm sending the information or to trade through a local broker. If the original tips are successful and the prospect either makes money by taking the advice or can be shown that he would have made money, a telephone call or telegram follows telling him to buy some other stock of little value which the tipster wishes to unload at a profit.

A LITTLE thought about the matter would convince the prospect that no firm could afford to spend about a dollar each on hundreds of telegrams or several dollars each on long distance telephone calls merely to advise a purchase through a local broker unless it was to profit on the selling end. Even if the firm giving the advice were to handle the account its legitimate commission would not warrant such expensive sales efforts unless the order should be very large.

ANOTHER angle to be remembered is that the reputable houses do not do business in this way. They do send letters to their customers commenting on the stock market outlook. They do mail conservative circulars advertising new issues which they have underwritten. But they will not send you telegrams and call you on the telephone from New York unless you are a very important customer and have requested such special attention.

ONE New York firm has been trying to interest Pittsburgh people to buy spreads. The purchase of a spread gives the holder the right to buy within thirty days a specified stock at a given price or to sell at a given price. The buying price is above the market at the time the contract is made and the selling price is below. The purchaser of a spread is merely gambling that the stock will advance or decline more than a certain number of points. If the stock does this he completes the transaction at a profit. If it does not he loses the money paid for the spread. All of the examples given in the sales letters showed prices at which the contracts could be exercised only two or three points away from the market. One local man sent a check for a spread but when the contract arrived he found the exercising prices 65 points away from the market, making his chances of winning practically nil. There are firms, however, which do a legitimate business in such options.

THE work of the Pennsylvania Bureau of Securities has done much to eliminate dishonest dealers in this state but it is powerless to prevent outsiders from soliciting business by mail, telephone or telegraph. This condition makes it a good rule to transact investment and speculative business with local houses only. There is no legitimate need of any buyer or seller of stocks or bonds which cannot be met by the recognized local brokers, investment security houses or banks.

SPECULATION has a necessary function in maintaining an open market for the distribution of securities but the successful speculator must have a wide knowledge of business affairs and unusually keen insight into market conditions. The recent bull market attracted thousands who are not properly equipped either in knowledge or finances, for such a hazardous pastime. The best advice for anyone intending to play the stock market is, "First of all don't, but if you are going to do it be sure that your broker is thoroughly reputable."

A LOCAL enterprise which is finding it necessary to expand to take care of a growing business is Pittsburgh Parking Garages, Inc. An addition costing $160,000 is being made to the unit on Penn avenue. Last winter this garage frequently turned 200 cars away for lack of space. The business of the other unit on Sixth avenue, between Fifth and Wylie avenues is being increased by the completion of the Liberty Bridge. The company has $1,000,000 of first mortgage 20-year 6 per cent bonds, $600,000 of 7 per cent cumulative preferred stock and 12,000 shares of common stock outstanding.

Pledge to the Public

On Used Car Sales

1. Every used car is conspicuously marked with its price in plain figures and that price, just as the price of our new cars, is rigidly maintained.

2. All Studebaker automobiles which are sold as CERTIFIED CARS have been properly reconditioned, and carry a 30-day guarantee for replacements of defective parts and free service on adjustments.

3. Every purchaser of a used car may drive it for five days, and then, if not satisfied for any reason, turn it back and apply the money paid as a credit on the purchase of any other car in stock—new or used. (It is assumed that the car has not been damaged in the meantime.)

Bring your old car and title and make us an offer. We are going to clean our stock before July 4th. Pennsylvania's Largest Traded Car Store Will Sell and Deliver More Than 3,000 Traded Cars in 1928.

A Safe Landing and a Victory for Prosperity

Success of Loan Means Progress and Prosperity

Rat-at-at-tat-tat-tat! As you go along the street in many parts of the city you hear the clatter of the pneumatic riveter at work as stories are added to the steel frame of buildings or sections are joined to bridges under construction. It is the music of industry and of business and of prosperity.

Yesterday ballots silently dropped into ballot boxes. By thousands they dropped, these bits of paper. Their echo will be in the noisy clatter of the riveter in the shops and on the construction works, the whirr of the airplane, the sound of the hammer and the saw, the groaning of the steam roller on the roads, the rumble of the concrete mixer, the merry whistle and jest of the happy worker as he goes about his task, to which he was set yesterday by the voters of Allegheny county—upward striving Allegheny.

That is what the result of the bond election means in one way. Primarily, of course, victory for the loan means that we wanted some roads, bridges, buildings, airport, park improvements, etc., and that we decided to buy them, just as we go and buy a suit of clothes. But, as we give work to the tailor, merchant, salesman, railroad man, wool grower and numerous others every time we get a new suit, we bestow employment on an immense scale by making great public improvements. We voted to pay out millions, but we just take them from one pocket and put them into another, since, in the final analysis, we are only putting ourselves to work.

The county is to be congratulated upon the success of the loan with the citizens. Yet it was to be expected since the citizens themselves—not the County Commissioners—demanded the improvements. The initiative only lay with the Commissioners—the people decided. The Commissioners took counsel of the people. They heard them and called them to their assistance. They were guided by delegations from rural communities and from towns. They were guided by the Citizens Committee on City Plan. They were guided by the Airport Committee, of which A. E. Braun is chairman. They were guided by the Town Hall Committee, of which George S. Davison is chairman. They were guided by the people.

Men prominent in large affairs of their own shared their precious time with their fellow citizens and worked for the welfare of the county as a whole, making studies, giving counsel and explaining the results of their labors, which, in all likelihood, have not ceased.

The implication is that the service of these men, especially those of the airport and town hall committees, in an advisory way will be continued. They have made studies and surveys covering months, and these projects went before the voters with the understanding that there had been no definite selection of sites. In that, and other details, the Commissioners, no doubt, will be guided by the men who have devoted so much time to promoting them. This understanding impelled thousands of citizens to support the entire bond issue.

All in all, the county has done itself proud. Now let us go forward in the completion of the program.

Rat-at-at-tat-tat-tat!

Monuments to Many Men

When Will the WORKERS Have Their Monument?
Mr. Kummer's Suggestion.

Everywhere on this earth men have built monuments from the earliest ages to commemorate great events or to honor great individuals.

The ancient Druids erected their heavy stones, each with its meaning. Egyptian Pharaohs piled up gigantic pyramids with tombs prepared for their bodies.

There have been monuments to men that freed the slaves, monuments to those that enslaved millions of human beings, monuments to generals that were successful killers of men, monuments even to horses and dogs.

BUT WHERE IS THE MONUMENT TO LABOR?

Frederic Arnold Kummer asks this question most eloquently:

THE UNKNOWN LABORER
Frederic Arnold Kummer

As we glance through the record of past centuries we find in every land monuments to the glory of the conquerors of earth, palace and pyramid, temple and tomb, but where are the monuments to the myriad toilers in the ranks who made those conquerors possible? Silent, unsung, they march down the pathway of the ages carrying temple and pyramid, palace and tomb, upon their backs. With sweat and blood they built what others planned. Their endless toil raised the vast walls of Babylon, the colossal figures of the Pharaohs, the mighty towers of Nineveh. Their hands drove the galleys of Tyre and of Carthage to uncharted seas, dug the canals of Mesopotamia, tilled the fields of India, molded the bricks of Ur. From the earliest dawn of civilization they have grown man's food, fought his wars, built his temples—even carved his gods! We have raised a monument to the Unknown Soldier—why not one to that even mightier figure, the Unknown Laborer? Upon the base of his statue should be graved

TO THE UNKNOWN LABORER OF THE AGES,
WHOSE CEASELESS TOIL HAS CREATED ALL
THE WEALTH, THE POWER, THE PROSPERITY OF THE WORLD.

Labor has created everything, from the first sharpened flint, the bow and arrow, the platform over the lakes, to the flying machines, submarines and wireless apparatus of today.

Honors, titles, wealth, monuments, palaces have rewarded those that have exploited and used the workers.

The laborer, the man of skill with hand and eye, has remained unknown, unrewarded. Mr. Kummer's line, "To the Unknown Laborer of the Ages," should be written on the noblest monument ever built by man. And LABOR WOULD BUILD IT.

Garrett P. Serviss Says:

Ancient War

LOOK at this radiograph of an arrowhead embedded in the second dorsal vertebra of a human backbone, and know that the date of this crime—for crime it was, whether inspired by war or by murder—was twice as ancient as the traditional time of Adam in the Garden of Eden, for it belongs to the Neolithic or later Stone Age.

The object was found by Dr. Morel, a well-known archeologist, in the grotto of Sainte Enemie, Department of Lozere, France. The arrowhead, of polished flint, entered flatwise by the second inter-costal space on the right-hand side of the victim. The bone was but slightly injured and the marrow not touched. Dr. Baudouin, who diagnosed the injury, notwithstanding its age of many thousand years, avers that the subject died subsequently to this injury from some other cause, for the wound itself could not have been mortal. Yet the interval between the reception of the injury and death was not great, for there is no indication of a natural process of reparation of the injured bone having begun.

This is by no means the first example of the finding of arrowheads fixed in human vertebrae of prehistoric date, although it is said to be unique in some particulars. It may be significant that another of these curious objects was found in the same Department, Lozere, several years ago. In that case, too, a flint arrowhead had penetrated a human backbone, and it was found possible to lift a little corner of the curtain of time covering the tragedy. Experts decided that the victim had been one of the dolichocephalic (long-headed), paleolithic (Old Stone Age) inhabitants of the Lozere region, while the weapon that inflicted his death was of the kind made by the later neolithic invaders who belonged to the brachycephalic (broad-headed) race of the Cro-Magnons, who apparently swept their less-advanced predecessors out of existence.

A PREHISTORIC ARROW HEAD THAT FOUND ITS MARK

It would appear, then, that these are truly relics of ancient war, war antedating the oldest struggles known to history, between different races of men contending for the mastery of the world. The Book of Genesis tells us that man was commanded to "subdue" the earth. This evidently implied that he would have to do battle with his own kind, for there were not only wild beasts to be mastered, but inferior races of his own species, who would not willingly surrender their birthright or become slaves to those stronger than themselves.

Cain's murder of Abel was a symbol of the coming reign of war, and from it we may perceive that it was not ordained that the victor should always be in every way the more excellent of the contending parties, for Abel was a better man in the eyes of the Lord than his slayer, and apparently he possessed higher qualities. But the qualities of jealousy and murder introduced through Cain were made to last. And even now, when our mastery of nature's forces has progressed so far that we are able to employ mysterious, invisible rays to reveal and picture the insides of our bodies and our bones, and even to aid in disclosing the long hidden and forgotten secrets of the most ancient graves, the twin demons of murder and war, which darkened man's career on his first emergence from Paradise, continue to pursue him and whisper madness in his ear.

This Beats Steve Brodie

FROM New Zealand comes a bridge story that sets a world's record. During a bridge party at Auckland each of the four players at one table was dealt 13 cards of the same unit.

One of the players became so excited he laid his hand down. The others immediately did the same and gazed gasping with thumping hearts.

If Sherlock Holmes were on this case he would want to know who shuffled the cards and how. He would probably presume that the deal was the first from a new pack, in which all the cards of each suit lie together, and that two perfect cuts and riffling and shuffles distributed the four suits in regular alternation.

But it is a record, just the same. The chances are said to be 100,000,000 to 1.

Once Overs

Take Your Medicine

ALL your life someone has been at hand to help you over the stones.

Someone has smoothed your pathway from the cradle up to now.

You have gotten to the point where you are surprised at obstacles.

You wonder why anyone should want to get in your way.

You have long since ceased to put forth your utmost effort in any direction because when you did work hard you found that it was useless because conditions were eventually smoothed by some good angel.

And now, since you have not done your best along some certain line, you find that that fact has blocked your purpose in its fulfilment.

You can't quite understand why someone does not come to the rescue.

Perhaps it would be better for you if your family and friends let you work things out and learn a lesson from the results of your lack of labor.

You never did think it necessary to work hard.

If you were tired you quit work and rested.

If social diversions came your way, even when you were busiest you dropped the duty and had a good time. Now your obstacles are your medicine.

Take it and get well.

It is probably the treatment you should have had years ago.

The Rhyming Optimist

By ALINE MICHAELS

I Would Have Courage

I WOULD have courage, so sometimes
I face life's darkest threats,
All things which mar its joyous chimes,
Follies and fears and debts.

I bring them from their native gloom
Into the sun to see
Why they can rob my days of bloom
And song and ecstasy.

They shrink, they fade before the light
Like mists by dawn dissolved;
Forgotten is the dreaded plight,
The long-feared problem solved.

I would have courage, so I dare
Not turn away my face
From ways grown dark; but singing, fare
Through every shadowed place.

Tales that are Told

Worst Story I Have Heard Today

By WILL ROGERS

LOTS of the folks in the East have gone up to summer boarding places in the deserted farm region of New England. Them farms ain't half as abandoned as you've been led to suppose. If you think they are, you better just go up there and inquire after a few sandwiches and some fresh eggs from the New York markets. I reckon you'll find a landlord hovering around some place.

Anyhow, there was a fellow and his wife that was taking a vacation on an abandoned farm, along with 12 other summer boarders. They used to eat out on the big porch, and this here Jones was always worried by a big, hungry-looking dog that sat near him and watched him eat every meal.

One day Jones says to the host, "Say, that dog bothers me. He never seems to watch the other boarders, but he just sits and begrudges me every bite I eat."

"Oh, he don't mean nothing," says the host. "He's a darn smart hound. He likes you all right, but he sorta feels that his rights is being violated. You see, that blue plate that you eat off of is the only blue plate at the table, the only one we got left out of an old set."

"Yes, but what's the gag? A blue plate ain't so unusual."

"No, it ain't unusual, only the hound knows that there is his plate, and he can hardly wait till you get through using it. He ain't exactly jealous, you mind, but he kinda covets that there plate of his just a mite."

Hits and Misses

IN THE stalls of a certain theater were seated a number of well-known critics. They were seeing the dress rehearsal of a forthcoming revue.

As the curtain came down for the last time they called for the author. The curtain went up and he was disclosed behind the footlights, bowing and smiling. But his expression soon altered, for the merry lads in front began to throw all kinds of missiles at him.

The author dodged behind a property tree and escaped the fusillade.

"It appears that I haven't made a hit tonight," he called out loudly. "But, thank goodness, you haven't either."

Gentle Persuasion

BOTH photographer and mother had failed to make the restless 4-year-old sit still long enough to have her picture taken. Finally the photographer suggested that "the little darling" might be quiet if her mother would leave the room. During her absence the picture was successfully taken.

On the way home the mother asked:

"What did the nice man say to make mother's little darling sit still?"

"He thed, 'You thit thtill, you little newthuns, or I'll knock your head off,' tho I that thtill," she explained.

Bad Luck

"YES," said Mrs. Lackpenny, dramatically, "dear Claude is going to set up in business on his own. He leaves the office next week. He has burnt his bridges!"

"Poor dear," said her friend, sympathetically, "I do hope they weren't his best ones!"

Hopping Back

TIME was when millions of Americans were interested in hops. A foamy brew, now largely reminiscence, by its pleasantly bitter taste brought the product of our hop vines into a place of distinction.

Mr. Volstead's temporary triumph wrought havoc in the hop trade. Home demand fell away and even the exports lagged.

But now the hop is coming into its own again. Last year's American production was the largest on record—a third of the world's. And half of these 31,800,000 homegrown pounds were in some fashion used at home.

The record does not show by what means. But if it was in any part due to surreptitious brewing, we can only hope for the speeding of the time when the hop can come out of hiding and take its place openly and unafraid as one of man's benefactors.

New York Day by Day

by O. O. McINTYRE

SEVERAL sight-seeing buses are shortly to invade the Black Belt of Harlem and megaphone its wonders to wide-eyed tourists. The smoky section north of One Hundred and Twenty-fifth street has been so richly exploited recently that it ranks with the Bowery and Chinatown as an attraction.

Out-of-towners inquire about it more and more and several for-hire hotel guides include it in their itinerary. More than half a dozen novels and plays in the past year had their locale in the Lenox avenue environs.

It has become the most talked about Negro section in the world. A crop of colored writers, song makers and playwrights have added largely to its opulence. Paul Robinson is featured in a London play. Claud McKay is writing another novel in Bolougne. Harlem's envoys are in many distant lands.

The recent passing of Florence Mills, the wistful bright-eyed little mulatto who always winged her way back to Harlem from foreign triumphs, received as much newspaper space as any demise during that year. Writers infused a new and romantic glamour to the Black Belt. It was reported "hot."

Josephine Baker's Parisian popularity was something else to wag tongues about the district, for she was a product of the black and tan cafes. The play "Porgy," with an all-Negro cast, lifted a tragic cripple of 125th street to stardom.

The Harlem Negro business and residential district has been making strides for years, but its discovery was sudden. George Jean Nathan was first to make excursions there and write his impressions, and then Carl Van Vechten immortalized it in "Nigger Heaven."

The small sprinkling of slummers from down town became a nightly horde of whites in evening dress swarming the cafes and dance halls. Song spirituals were featured at stately Carnegie Hall. Curious Black Belt slang became a part of the language. And white women acquired dark admirers.

* * *

In a night club a white-faced girl informed the head waiter a diamond bracelet of enormous value had become unclasped and lost. It was announced from the floor and a careful search of the room was made. Two hours later a cloak room attendant picked the bracelet from the chiffon flounces of another lady's dress. It had dropped and became entangled there. And the lady in whose dress it dropped was the divorced wife of the husband of the owner.

* * *

In another club a tall imperious creature swathed in chinchilla—or maybe it was nutria, I'm not up in furs—and mounted on jeweled heels came in with a crisp-looking gentleman who seemed to be there by sufferance. In fact he was, being one of those moneybags who married hastily out of the chorus. The trap drummer considerately looked the other way as they spun about on the dance floor. A few years ago he was the lady's husband.

The appeal of the night club to me is solely in the taut and electrical tension of the atmosphere. There is a feeling any sort of human drama may explode just around the corner and usually that is so. As a contrast the bored attendants are generally in some dark corner whipping off ennui by reading the true confession type of magazines dealing with "actual stories from actual life."

The small shop idea has been a boon to many merchants whose large stores were not so prosperous. Now their display windows have been converted into small specialty shops and the added revenue not only pays their own rent but brings in many customers they never had before.

Window mirrors in small shops are a boon to those mustache fixers who seem to think they have a little streak of Adolphe Menjou in them. They are able to get a flock of extra pecks at themselves in their promenade. When some men begin snapping at fifty in New York, the annex a wisp of mustache and t' notion they are heaven's gift to th ladies.

Smoking and Drinking

By DR. FRANK CRANE.

The statement has often been put forth by those who resent the Prohibition Amendment that the next move of the Puritans will be to bar tobacco.

This rests upon the assumption that the Eighteenth Amendment was put across by a bunch of fanatics, by those who were irritated because other people enjoy themselves. That is to say, they are supposed to have that characteristic of the Puritan that led Macaulay to say that they objected to bear baiting not because it gave pain to the bear, but because it gave pleasure to the spectators. This is erroneous.

There may be some whose feeling of morality is injured when they see other people enjoying themselves, but they are not many.

The prohibition amendment was carried because there is a widespread conviction among the American people that alcohol not only injures the individual that uses it, but wrongs his family and renders him a menace to society.

What happens to the individual is not so important as the effects of what one does upon other people.

Society has no objection to a man enjoying himself in any way he pleases, provided his enjoyment does not work harm to others.

The prohibition amendment, in spite of all that is said to the contrary, has increased bank accounts, heightened the prosperity of the worker, lessened crime and been in every way a benefit except that it deprives some people of the questionable pleasure of intoxication.

Tobacco stands on a different footing. Its use cannot be defended, as it is not a food and, possibly, in some cases, does harm.

I was once asked to prepare some advertisements for a tobacco concern and an expert from that concern consulted with me to get my opinion about the benefits of using tobacco. But in the end the opinion prevailed that the less said about its effects the better, and the campaign to sell tobacco should rest upon the basis that the people wanted it whether it did harm or good. The question of its medical effects was left untouched.

But whatever you may say of tobacco it is a peaceful vice. No man comes careening home and beats up his family under the influence of cigarets. No man is nerved to commit some outrageous crime by the influence of his pipe.

In short, tobacco may possibly harm the user, but it does not harm anybody else, except by way of being offensive.

There is no danger, therefore, that these imaginary Puritans, who were supposed to bar liquor because it gives pleasure to others, will take up the cudgels against tobacco.

OH, THESE WOMEN!

By LEOLA ALLARD

GREENWICH VILLAGE is a treat to plenty of folks, but to others it is just Greenwich Village. An atmosphere stuffy to the point of needing lime in many places, but peppered with interesting shops and strange people. Its streets are full of screaming children and the cafes and shops full of women dressed as Gypsies, or Russians or Italian peasants or almost anything they are not.

The village boasts an artist and his wife with a wise bird called "Solomon." "Solomon" is a parrot and only one of an over-crowded household. Besides him there are cages full of canaries, other cages full of finches, a poodle named Jiggs, and a cat named Maggie.

When this artist arts, Solomon sits on first one shoulder and then the other, and often—oh ever so often—right on the artist's head. And when he is on the head, and even from the shoulders, he reaches into the artist's hair and pulls it out, one hair at a time.

In about six months, five days and 12 hours now, the parrot has rendered said artist entirely bald on the top of his head, and he is now working on the fringes, so it won't be long now.

Doesn't he care?

Oh, my dear no! If anyone remarks about the parrot's pastime, these odd people say: "Isn't he adorable? We are devoted to Solomon."

It is quite the fad these days to announce your engagement to another woman before your wife has granted you a divorce. It was done once in New York last week, but twice in Chicago. The men told reporters, too.

It must be a bit difficult in such cases to know to which woman a man should show his gallantry—if any.

Chicago has a lady bootlegger, who has a handbag made of the finest leather, reinforced with steel bands, to keep the sample bottles from wearing through. She carries in it samples of fine wines, in small bottles. She is stunning, and looks quite above suspicion.

She sells to the rich men on La Salle street, and the purse, which was made to order, was her own pet idea.

Forest Fire Menace

FIRE is the greatest single enemy of the forests. The United States Forest Service places the average annual number of forest fires in the entire United States during the past 10 years at 51,000. The average area swept by fires each year stands at 15,000,000 acres, of which 11,800,000 acres is forest land. The annual damage runs up to $20,000,000, exclusive of damage to young growth, watersheds and recreational facilities, and other damage the money value of which can not be estimated.

The outstanding fact about forest fires is that 90 per cent of them are man caused. When the American people stop burning their wooded areas the solution of the nation's timber supply problem will not be far off.
